Memo to Reagan Linked Hostages' Release to Arms

By David Hoffman

Washington Post Service
WASHINGTON — The White day showing that at the time President Ronald Reagan approved arms sales to Iran, he was advised by his national security adviser that the shipments "may well be our only way to achieve the release of the Americans held in Beirut."

The administration has asserted that the weapons shipments were not approved as part of a swap for hostages, but to improve U.S. relations with Iranian moderates.

The documents made public Fri-day were Mr. Reagan's intelligence finding last Jan. 17 that authorized the sales and the withholding from Congress of information about them, and a three-page supporting ton Post Service HACKENSACK, New Jersey --- Mary Beth Whitehead signed an agreement to have a baby for a couple in exchange for $10,000. But in the delivery room, moments after her daughter was born, she changed her mind.

"At the end, something took over," the New Jersey housewife testified Thursday. "I guess it was just being a mother. It overpowered me. I just cried and cried. I didn't want the $10,000. I just wanted my child." Her voice cracking, ner eyes streaming tears,

Mrs. Whitehead, 29, was on the witness stand in a case that for the first time in a U.S. court tests the validity of a surrogate mother contract. Upward of 600 children have been born in the last decade through agreements in which a woman is paid to be artificially inseminated with the sperm of a man whose wife is infertile. The woman then gives up the child to the Although three other cases of mothers who changed their minds have been cited by clinics that sponsor such arrangements, all have been settled out of court, with the father giving up the baby. However, in the case of "Baby M," as the 9month-old girl born to Mrs. Whitehead is known, the father, William Stern, a biochemist from the suburban town of Tenafty, and his wife, Elizabeth, a pediatrician, seized the child in July after a court awarded them temporary

"Everybody is talking about mothers' rights and nobody seems to be concerned about fathers' rights," Mr. Stern said Thursday outside the courtroom. "Fathers have dreams, too." At the trial, which began Monday, the Sterns wept on the witness stand. Richard Whitehead, Mary Beth's husband, testified that he too had changed his mind in the delivery room, as he watched his wife "crying hysterically."

The case has attracted national attention. About 40 book and movie offers have been made to both couples. Attorneys say they expect the case to reach the New Jersey Supreme Court and set a precedent.

Legislation to govern the practice, which critics oppose as a form of "baby selling," has been debated in more than a dozen states and the District of Columbia, but no laws have been passed

Mrs. Whitehead, a high-school dropout who was married at 16 and has two older children, answered a newspaper advertisement placed by the infertility center in 1984.

In almost four hours of testimony Thursday, she said that she had felt the pain of her sister, Beverly, who could not have children. "I thought that God would" aid Beverly, she said, if she helped another couple.

Mrs. Stern, 41, testified that she had delayed pregnancy until her medical residency was finished in 1981, but then discovered she had a mild form of multiple sclerosis. She said she feared she might become paralyzed if she were to become pregnant. Mrs. Whitehead's attorney, Harold Cassidy, called this "an irrational fear." He said he would call on medical experts to refute the contention that Mrs. Stern could not bear children. The contract asserts that she is "infertile" and could not be enforced if she is fertile, Mr. Cassidy maintained.

Mr. Stern, 40, testified that he was the only child of refugees from Nazi Germany, both deceased. He said he wanted a child biological-See MOTHER, Page 6

18 Held in Alleged Uganda Coup Plot KAMPALA, Uganda (UPI) — Ugandan security forces have arrested

18 persons in a suspected plot to overthrow the year-old government of President Yoveri Museveni, official sources said Friday.

At least four of the 18 were formally charged with planning a coup, a crime punishable by death, officials said.

The sources said the 18 were arrested Thesday in Kampala, the Ugandan capital, and included members of the Uganda Freedom Move-ment and the Federal Democratic Movement, two former guerrilla organizations that joined Mr. Museveni's coalition government last year.

Korean Dissidents Move to Heal Split

SEOUL (Renters) — The dissi-dent leaders Kim Dae Jung and Kim Yong Sam appeared ready Friday to end a serious split in South Korea's main opposition party over their accusation that the party's president was not providing leadership.

The Kims, the real power behind the New Korea Democratic Party, beld conciliation talks with the party's president, Lee Min Woo. The two want bim to stay in the post, their sides said. On Thursday, eight senior opposition members of parliament expressed support for Mr.

Mr. Lee offered Wednesday to resign after the Kims publicly accused him of mismanaging the party's fight for direct presidential elections as a prelude to full democracy. Mr. Lee hinted in December that his party would consider a proposal by the ruling Democratic Justice Party for a perliamentary government under a new constitution provided President Chun Doo Hwan allowed greater democracy.

Argentine Rights Groups File Charges
BUENOS AIRES (WF) — Argentine human rights groups have filed more than 1,000 criminal charges against about 650 people, including at least 98 retired generals and admirals, in an effort to initiate cases on rights violations before a Feb. 22 deadline set by President Raul Alfonsin and Congress.

Eleven rights groups said they had asked the armed forces' highest tribunal Thursday to take immediate action on the cases. Should it fail to do so, they said, the cases would pass to civil jurisdiction. Those accused included five active-duty generals and one serving admiral.

The law approved last month at the request of Mr. Alfonsin stipulates that security force personnel and others not called by a court to testify before Feb. 22 cannot be indicted after that date for crimes committed in the 1970s during the so-called "dirty war" against leftist goernilla groups.

first of the series of student demonstrations that have swept the country took place Dec. 5 and Dec. 9. The demonstrations involved several thousand students, according to a foreign student who witnessed them.

Despite government efforts to discourage them, students subsequently took to the streets in at least a dozen other cities, including Shanghai and Beijing.

In two telephone interviews toward the end of December, Mr. Fang acknowledged that he had given a talk to students Dec. 4 in which he expressed sympathy with their de-mands for broader participation in the local als for any major political change.

In an interview with The Associated Press last week, Mr. Fang is reported to have said that political change must be made under and by the Communist Party. He criticized students for impatience and said he did not approve of the recent demonstrations.

Many university students nonetheless appear convinced that Mr. Fang courageously disputed a senior Communist Party official. Deputy Prime Minister Wan Li, in a discussion the two are reported to have had during a visit by Mr. Wan to Hefei in late November.

According to a now famous wall poster that students at Beijing University put up at the end of December, Mr. Wan said democracy was something granted by the Communist Party to the people.

Mr. Fang challenged that, the wall poster said, arguing that democracy was not granted by party leaders but earned by the people through their struggles.

When asked about this in late December.

Mr. Fang said that Mr. Wan had not made any such simplistic statement but had spoken of democratic rights granted by the Chinese Constitution. Whatever the truth may be, Mr. Fang's student admirers are determined to believe the more dramatic version of the story.

What is certain about Mr. Fang is that he has questioned some Marxist tenels as well as Chinese educational methods and has strongly advocated that intellectuals pursue independent thinking and assume a leadership role. This is evident in an interview he gave to the official weekly English-language magazine Beijing Review, published Dec. 15.

In the interview, Mr. Fang said: The emergence and development of new theories necessitate creating an atmosphere of democracy and freedom in the university." And he added. "In the university environment, there should be nothing that can only be upheld and that allows no questioning of why it must

WASHINGTON - The U.S. Air Force is asking Congress for permission to conduct three tests of its iet-launched anti-satellite weapon against targets in space begin-ning in October, Pentagon officials

> But the air force, which says it has taken its test program as far as possible without new tests on real targets, will seek to resume the tests and to spend more than $1.1 billion in 1988 and 1989 on research and production of the weapon.

Last year Congress refused to allow most work relating to pro-duction of the weapon, and cut the funds available for research while blocking tests against space objects in fiscal 1987, which ends Sept. 30.

In 1986, with a similar moratorium in place, the air force conduct-ed two space tests by pointing the missile at the light of a star instead of at actual targets. In 1985, the air force conducted the only test to date against an actual target, destroying an old experimental satel-lite that was still in orbit. The ASAT rocket is launched from an F-15 jet flying at high

Members of Congress and others who favor the test moratorium have argued that as long as neither the United States nor the Soviet Union tests anti-satellite technologies, the arms race can be kept out of outer space. The Pentagon has said the Soviet Union already has an operational anti-satellite weapon and is conducting research into more advanced technologies for the same purpose.

Air force officials say that if the moratorium on tests continues, it might be pointless to continue the

While the air force hopes to resume the tests, it has already cut back sharply on the number of mis-siles it plans to buy. In all, the program is worth about $3.8 bil-lica. The number of missiles being purchased is classified, but was re-duced by two-thirds last year, offi-cials said.

Instead, the air force is beginning to look at ways to improve on the current technology, which uses a two-stage rocket to launch a guid-ed warhead that collides with the target satellite.

Some of the money in next year's budget request will be used to look into new technologies, including some from the Strategic Defense Initiative program, that could be used to destroy satellites orbiting beyond the range of the present missile. These include ground-based laser weapons and missiles able to reach higher into space.

Representative Les AuCoin, a Democrat of Oregon who was the author of legislation imposing the test moratorium, said Thursday that he could not imagine Congress granting permission to conduct tests of the anti-satellite weapon against space objects or appropriating anything near the amount of money that is being sought.

"It is a ridiculous proposition," said Mr. AuCoin, a member of the defense subcommittee of the House Appropriations Committee, "It's like feeding caviar to a corpse."

He noted that the House had approved the test moratorium leglation by wide margins several times, and that it was the one arms control amendment out of several that passed the House last year to survive in a compromise bill worked out with the Senate, which at first had not imposed such a moratorium.

Mr. AuCoin said he would be willing to see the air force continue research into anti-estellite weapons on a modest scale, but that no tests of new technology against actual targets should be permitted.

New York Times Service
WASHINGTON — The State Department has said in a confiden-tial report delivered to Congress that the African National Congress is deeply obligated to Moscow and the South African Communist Party for military assistance in waging guerrilla warfare against the Pretoria government.

But the report is ambiguous on whether communism or black na-tionalism is the predominant ideology in South African resistance politics and particularly in such groups as the African National Congress, the principal guerrilla or-ganization seeking to topple South Africa's white-run government.

The 11-page study by the depart-ment, entitled "Communist Influ-African Communist Party as hav-ing aligned itself with the popular ence in South Africa," was prepared in response to a request from congressional conservatives angered over the enactment last year of economic sanctions against South Africa,

Such requests often become part of legislation, and the department similarly was obliged to provide a report demanded by congressional liberals as to the extent of malnutrition in the so-called black homelands within South Africa.

That report found widespread hunger in the homelands and an infant mortality rate sharply above that for whites in South Africa as well as higher than that of blacks living in such urban areas as Soweto, near Johannesburg. The homelands are supposedly natonomous black entities created by the South African government in rural areas within South Africa's boundaries, but they are not recognized as independent by any gov-ernment other than Pretoria. The Congress," according to the study. The SACP continues to view its historical alliance with the ANC as State Department study relied on previously published data because its main hope for winning power in U.S. policy forbids contact with the South Africa."

Managua Adopts Constitution;

MANAGUA - Nicaragua adopted on Monday its first constitation since the Sandinist government came to power seven years

The document is modeled largely on other Latin American constitutions and espouses political pluralism, a mixed economy, nonalignment and anti-imperialism.

But the constitution, known here as the "carta magna," is not expected to alter significantly the country's political life, dominated by the Sandinist National Liberation Front that led the 1979 revolution against General Anastasio Somoza.

The document, approved Nov. 19 by the National Constituent Assembly after two years of work, guarantees freedom of expression, prohibits imprisonment without court order and guarantees the right to strike.

Government officials have said that the ideals expressed in the doc-ument could be hard to practice while war continues against an estimated 15,000 guerrillas for whom the U.S. Congress recently approved $100 million in mainly military aid. Most civil liberties in Nicaragua are severely curbed under state of emergency regulations imposed in 1985. The government has justified the measures, including press censorship and a ban on political rallies without government permission, by pointing to the military threat from the rebels.

The proclamation of the consti-tution coincided with widespread predictions that several of the articles concerning rights would have to be immediately suspended because of the state of emergency.

One hundred and fifty of the document's 202 articles can be sospended by the president "when the security of the nation, economic conditions or national catastrophe demand it."

Rafael Solis, vice president of the National Constituent Assembly, recently said, "We believe this constitution will only take full effect in the totality of its articles when the war is over." The United States, which regards Nicaragna as a threat because of its ties to Cuba and the Soviet Union, has led opponents of the Sandinists in casting doubt upon the government's assurances it is interested in real political pluralism.

Some opposition politicians contend that the constitution will be used by the Sandinists to strengthen and legitimize their grip on pow-

If there is no compression the armed forces should not be identified with the governing party. Critics also say that the constitution puts the election machinery in the hands of the governing party.

The constitution says elections will be organized and directed by an election commission appointed by the National Constituent Assembly, in which the Sandinists hold 61 seats. As a result, critics say, the Sandinist National Liberation Front is assured of having an electoral commission sympathetic to its views. u U.S. Trainees Return

The first group of Nicaraguan rebel commanders trained in Plori-da by the U.S. military has returned to Central America and training of a second group has begun, The New York Times reported from Washington.

At least 67 commanders from five guerrilla groups were trained for two months at a secret military site in Florida, according to several rebel officials. They said that special emphasis was given to the need for a more unified guerrilla move-ment as well as to basic military skills

Rebel officials say the training covered four main areas: paramed ical help, explosives, military leadership and instruction on how to train new recruits.

American and rebel officials estimate that more than 300 commanders will be trained this year in the new Reagan administration effort to forge the rebels into a guerrilla army capable of challenging the Sandinists inside Niceragua This comes as administration and congressional officials acknowledge that future American backing for the rebels, known as contras, is in grave doubt.

A U.S. official who helps overse rebel operations said, "It's ironic, but five years of backing the contres has really come down to what we can do in the next five months."

tary of state for inter-American affairs, said Thursday he did not foresee a "classical military victory" by the contras, saying instead that a popular oprising will eventu-ally topple the Sandinists. The Veterans Agency Fined In U.S. Radiation Case for the payment of lawyer-interns at the U.S. District Court here.

By Robert Lindsey New York Times Service

SAN FRANCISCO - Ruling that the Veterans Administration had unlawfully and "recklessly" destroyed thousands of documents it had been ordered to produce in a lawsuit by veterans charging that they were exposed to radiation, a U.S. judge has imposed about $115,000 in penalties against the

The U.S. District judge, Marilyn Hall Patel, also said Thursday that two VA employees who had described a systematic effort to purge the files of potentially embarrassing documents at a hearing here last month had been threatened with reprisals "that may constitute criminal conduct, namely obstruction of justice and contempt of court." She ordered the agency to act to prevent harassment of em-

In her ruling, Judge Patel said "there is significant circumstantial evidence" to show that officials of the agency started a conscious effort last summer expressly to purge their files of any documents that would be helpful to the veterans group in the litigation.

Not only were many docum destroyed, the judge said, but officials of the agency lied in denying the existence of two computerized filing systems of other materials of Judge Patel ordered the Veterans Administration to establish an internal procedure that would guarantee access to its records and to withhold no more records unlawfully. She said she would appoint an overseer to evaluate the agency's plan and compliance.

Gena Cadieux, a Justice Department lawyer who represented the court that allegations of harassment of one witness, Ronald B. Abrams, had been referred to investigators for possible prosecu-tion. The lawyer declined to say whether the department would appeal the judge's ruling.

The unusual order imposing eco nomic sanctions against a U.S. agency was handed down as a resuit of a lawsuit brought by a veterans group, the National Association of Radiation Survivors. The veterans are seeking to overturn a Civil War-era law that still sets a $10 limit on lawyers' fees in seeking veterans' benefits.

The organization said it represents thousands of veterans who were exposed to life-threatening doses of radiation while occupying Hiroshima and Nagasaki, Japan, where the first atomic bombs were exploded in 1945, and at subsequent nuclear tests after World War II. It contends that veterars ant nuclear tests after World need sophisticated and therefore costly legal help to press claims, which the Veterans Administration has denied, and that they suffered debilitating effects because of exposure to the radiation.

Judge Patel ordered the Veterans Administration to pay a sum equivalent to virtually all the legal fees and costs the veterans group incurred in seeking to gain access to the agency's records, plus $15,000 that will be placed in a fund used

Ideas for a Latin Opening

There is a small new flare of diplomacy in Central America. Some of the Latin democracies, expecting a military surge in Nicaragua as the contras received fresh U.S. aid, have sought to head off the surge by reviving the Contadora peace talks. These talks have been in limbo since the United States pronounced their fruits of last summer unacceptably lavorable to the Sandinists. At the same time, Costa Rica, no powerhouse but a decent democratic country fearful of being drawn into the fire, is advancing an initiative to get all the world's democracies to shake a finger at Managua. Is any of this for real? A deep galf remains between the Sandinists, who wish to consolidate power on their Marxist terms, and the United States, which is working through the contras to restore democracy to Nicaragua and break the Sandinists' Cuban and Soviet ties. Neither in Managua nor in Washington is flexibility visible. The Nicaraguan government seems determined to stave off the new military challenge of the contras, and the U.S. government seems equally determined to stave off the new political challenge of the Democrats.

Still, it would be unforgivable for any reasonable negotiating opening not to be explored. There may be one. Though the Organization of American States is sidelined by internal divisions, its secretarygeneral, João Clemente Baena Soares, has oined an effort to revive Contadora. The United States has formally complained about the Brazilian diplomat's role. But why complain? The problem is not that the United States gets bad publicity because of its complaining; it can live with that. The point is, why not try to use the horsepower added by Mr. Baena Soares (and by his fellow Contadora recruit, UN Secretary-General Javier Pérez de Cuéllar) to explore some of the new ideas floating around? Such as the idea of making the next mayoral elections in Nicaragua a test of the Sandinist's avowed, if dubious, taste for pluralism.

All of the Latins except those most de-pendent on the United States say there is a better chance of reining in the Sandinists by political envelopment than by military assault. They may be fooling themselves, but the prevalence and political roots of this view leave the U.S. government pretty much isolated in its commitment to a con-tra enterprise lacking both military and political credibility in most Latin eyes. The American choice has always been between two different sorts of chances. The diplomatic chance at least offers the United States good Latin democratic company.

Right Man for the CIA

The sad truth about Washington's chief collector of secrets is no longer a secret. There seems to be no chance that William Casey, the director of central intelligence. can recover sufficiently from a cancer operation to resume his duties. Already the capital buzzes with speculation about who should succeed him. But in order to get the right who, there has to be a lot more thinking about how to make the choice.

The country has gone through enough turmoil involving the CIA; Mr. Casey's departure provides the chance to step back and consider the criteria for appointment. Should the next DCL as the incumbent is known, be a career intelligence officer, someone who knows the business and is detached from politics? Or should the next director be a close associate of the president, someone whose access to the Oval Office can open ears to the CIA's expertise?

The Casey example forms a strong argument that presidents and Congress should push hard for nonpolitical directors.

The DCI heads not only the CIA but the whole intelligence community, 100,000 people, with a budget in the billions. It includes the National Security Agency, which deals with communications, the National Reconnaissance Office, which manages spy satellites, and various Pentagon operations. There is no real problem with collection of information. People on the right and the left favor continued upgrading of these capabilities. The difficulties center on covert operations like the "secret" analyses of these wars and other events. The director plays a pivotal role in both these activities. Is he becoming an advocate for clandestine military action instead of offering a cool, professional evaluation? Is he distorting CIA analyses to make the operations look good and to fit policy instead of providing independent judgments?

These are the questions that have been asked about Mr. Casey. He deserves high marks for reinvigorating the agency. But suspicions of partisanship followed him evervwhere. He was Mr. Reagan's 1980 campaign manager, and the president broke all precedent by making him DCL Mr. Cassy did not restrict himself to providing intelligence but became a strong policy advocate, particularly of covert actions.

The DCI's first task is to provide the president with reliable information, not to become a cheerleader or an apologist. Having a political pal of the president as director raises doubts about the analyses and the information, even if the doubts are unfounded. It clouds the integrity of the agency. At the same time, a careerist risks being too much a company man.

The DCl, after Senate confirmation, serves at the president's pleasure. It would probably be preferable that the director be thought of in the same way as the director of the FBI — Republican or Democrat, but neither a crony nor a strong partisan or policy advocate. The ideal candidate would be familiar with the intelligence business, but not a careerist; it would be someone who could serve a president of either party. The FBI director is also limited to one 10-year term. That model might be right for the director of central intelligence, though the job carries so much veiled power that a shorter term, say six years, might be better.

Meanwhile, with or without congressional guidelines, the president must soon pick a successor. It would be easy to choose a political ally from the Senate or a caretaker professional from the CIA. It would be farsishted to name a person outside partisan politics and above the intelligence bureaucracy. Here is the test: Is the candidate someone whom the next president would be pleased to keep on the job?

Learning to Produce

During the past two centuries, in all of the world's rich countries, labor has been moving out of agriculture into industry. Food production has not fallen because farmers' productivity has steadily risen. It has freed people for other kinds of work, making these economies grow and raising everybody's standard of living.

Now the same process is overtaking manufacturing. Within the past decade or so, in most of the industrial countries, employ-ment in manufacturing has been falling. But with only one exception, Britain, manufacturing output has continued to rise in the industrial democracies. Productivity is increasing, and labor is shifting from factories to services. It will be useful to keep this process in mind when legislation on competitiveness and trade protection begins to move through Congress. People in Congress often talk as if the number of jobs in manufacturing were the true measure of industrial strength. That is wrong. As factories learn to produce more goods with fewer people, prosperity rises.

But there are sharp variations from one country to another. The U.S. Labor Department has just published figures on manufacturing productivity through 1985 for most of the advanced countries. To see what is happening, it helps to compare national performance over a fairly long time — say, the dozen years beginning in 1973, when the long postwar boom ended. During those years the fastest gains in manufacturing productivity were made not in Japan but in Belgium, where it doubled; factory jobs there fell by more than a third. while output rose 20 percent. Japan's productivity gain was nearly as great, and since manufacturing jobs there held steady, output nearly doubled as well. The poorest performance in manufacturing productivity, among the major countries, was Cana-da's; having fallen into the habit of depending on its natural resources to generate its wealth, Canada has been careless about industrial efficiency. That carelessness has made its record even worse than that of the United States, the runner-up for last place. But in both countries, productivity (in manufacturing, although not in services) has picked up in the past several years. Could that signal a new and healthier trend? Maybe. Take a second look at Britain, which reached its peak year for manufac-turing employment in 1966. Its factory out-put is lower now than it was in 1973. But since 1980, productivity in manufacturing there has been rising at a rate approaching Belgium's and Japan's. With enough determination, it seems, sudden and dramatic changes are possible even for the lappards.

Spill a Little Sweetness

Trans-Atlantic economic conflict is recurring with increasing ferocity. The latest dispute arises from threatened U.S. exports to Spain worth £340 million [$500 million] a year. The row may yet be resolved before the Feb. 1 deadline for a U.S. retaliatory strike against EC comestibles. If not, the EC is threatening its own retaliation, which could touch off an orgy of commercial vio-lence between the allies. Both sides, but Washington especially, should allow political and military friendship to spill a little sweetness into [their] commercial relations. - The Independent (London).

U.S. Diplomacy Can Be Revived

I the message that we're not dead in the water," a senior State Department officer said recently, as trips to the Middle East and Eastern Europe were set up for the U.S. officials responsible for those areas, and Secretary of State George Shultz set out for Africa, But alas, American diplomacy is dead, stone dead, in the water. Mr. Shultz's African visit is largely ceremonial. Assistant Secretary of State Richard Murphy carried no proposals with him to Amman, Jerum and Cairo last week. He was authorized to inform the govern-ments in those capitals that the United States "would be helpful if it could" to the Middle Eastern peace process, such as it is. He inquired if they might have some suggestions. It is difficult to imagine what Deputy Secretary of State John Whitehead is to say to the East European governments that can be constructive. What is there to say? That a U.S. government still exists? That it would like to put together a policy that could repair the devastation caused in recent weeks to allied relations and American diplomatic credibility?

Defense Minister Giovanni Spadolini of Italy is one European who has been a friend to the United States, at some personal political cost, as well as a staunch enemy of terrorism. He said a few days ago, dryly, that while feeling personally "distillusioned" by American conduct, "the American political system with its checks and balances should be able to find a way..." In the midst of a severe food and energy shortage, Romania held a referen-dum. The result: 17,699,772 Roma-nians voted yes, no one voted no. A shutout. A perennial contender for the honor of the most repressive regime on earth (in Romania, all type-writers must be registered with the police) had conducted what may be the most perfect election yet. The Tirana Index is a proven instrument. But events over the holi-days have persuaded me that, notwithstanding its accuracy and elegance, there is another measure of tyranny, more subtle and more quali-tative, that needs to be explored, Call By Charles Kranthammer it the Pardon Index: The more lawless, capricious and imperious a re-gime, the greater its propensity to make use of the power to pardon.

There have been a lot of pardous issued over the holidays. In the most famous of these, Mikhail Gorbachev phoned Andrei Sakharov and re-leased him from exile in Gorky, to which Mr. Sakharov had been banished as arbitrarily as he has now been recalled. His wife, Yelena Bonner, was granted a formal pardon for "anti-Soviet activities."

It makes of freedom a legal indulgence, an act of serendipity.

In Nicaragna, Engene Hasenfus, convicted by a People's Tribunal and sentenced to 30 years in prison, served 10 weeks before he was placed in Senator Christopher Dodd's Christmas stocking for return to Wisconsin. Caught up in the same holiday spirit, terrorists calling themselves the Revolutionary Justice Organization chose Aurel Cornéa, one of five Frenchmen held captive in Lebanon, and freed him.

A pardon is a wonderful thing, particularly if you are the one being pardoned, and particularly if, like the Sakharovs and Mr. Comea, you are innocent. As for Mr. Hasenfus, he can be considered either a criminal or a prisoner of war, depending on whether or not you believe he qualifies as a combatant in a civil war.

But in terms of politics or justice the pardon is a fraud. "In all supremacy of power," said a 17th-century philosopher, "there is inherent a prerogative to pardon." The reverse equally true: In all prerogative to pardon, there is inherent the supremacy of power. The logic of the pardon is that justice is a gift to be dispensed by power. It makes of freedom a legal indulgence, a grant, an act of seren-dipity. What is intended as a show of humanity is often a mere show of cynicism, a display of arbitrary power (why clemency for A, and not for B?) for political ends.

Consider the manner in which the Soviets announced Mr. Sakharov's release. It betrayed the gesture's true purpose, which was to impress not Russians, but Westerners. The announcement on the Sakharovs came first from the Soviet Foreign Ministry. It is as if George Shultz, the U.S. secretary of state, were to announce clemency for a convicted murderer.

The free exercise of speech subsequently permitted to Mr. Sakharov has been similarly one-sided. He has appeared all over American televiappeared an over American traevision; he has yet to play Moscow.

In democracies, the pardon should be used sparingly, not for dispensing clemency but for righting obvious miscarriages of justice that are other-wise irremediable. Only in the rarest of occasions should it supplant the workings of ordinary justice. Free countries have another mechanism for dealing with that. It is called law. The promiscuous dispensation of clemency is not a sign of political liberality, but one of those identifying marks of tyranny - like winning an election with a perfect score, Washington Post Writers Group.

Always a Sucker

Regarding the opinion column "UNICEF: Where's the Phoniness?" (Dec. 23) by Stephen S. Rosenfeld: I do not understand the author's comment about "the exploitable (but previously ill-exploited) fact that people are suckers for kids." It was exploited in the 1940s: When UNICEF's chief shipping officer in Paris was seeking a low price for transporting a large amount of cod liver oil, he would start talking about the kids. Always good for another 10-percent reduction, he would say.

BERLIN — The impression is taking root that the Government's "English peril" maneuver is making greater headway than was anticipated. Experts who a fortnight ago were pre-dicting sweeping Socialist gains [in the Reichstag] have now toned down their estimates and are talking of "Red" victories in only 78 instead of 100 or 120 constituencies. The effect of the Government's decision is indicated in the Bismarckian "Hamburger Nachrichten," which welcomes new armaments because: "The clash with England is only a question of time. We must therefore prepare accordingly." It is announced that 1,428 candidates have been nominated in the Empire's 397 constituencies. According to the "Germania," the second ballots in the general election will take place on Jan. 22 [following the first ballots on Jan. 12].

the Nationalist troops broke down the formidable resistance of the Reds in the Casa del Campo and the University City [on Jan. 9] and came within gunshot distance of the first houses of the espital. It was the sixth day of the furious offensive launched against Madrid, into which General Francisco Franco has thrown the pick of his men, heavy gums, tanks and airplanes. After some of the most desperate lighting in the whole civil war, the Nationalists continued their advance from Las Rozas, capturing the inner suburbs of Aravaca, and storming the barricades on the westdrid. Meanwhile, the city was subjected to almost continuous bombardment from the air.

ARTS/LEISURE

The Sistine: Paradise Restored? By Mary Davis Suro New York Times Service ROME—In the six years since Gianhingi "I feel a general anxiety," said Colalucci, of the Arts in the Vatican Minseums at the Unit States provide inghly valued support, a coording to museum officials. Despite the figure and has been working at the Vatican.

ing in the Sistine Chapel to work face to face with the powerful images of Michelangelo's frescoed cealing, his hair has changed from brown with some gray to almost entirely white. And his face, which until recently generated a certain spontaneous pride and enthusiasm when he spoke of his position as the chief of the Vatican's program to restore more than 16,700 square feet (1,536 square meters) of Renaissance frescoes, now can quickly turn defensive and hostile. With about half of the restoration work behind him, and Colalucci's attention turning toward the cleaning of the highly com-plex "Fall and the Expulsion," the Vatican has been beset by criticism from both home and abroad. Colabucci admits that the criticism has produced a change in his seelings about the project.

The first complaints, primarily from artists, did not get much attention, but in recent months the project has become the subject of heated debate here.

The Italian Communist Party newspaper L'Unità recently ran a story about Colainec's work under the headline, "Restanro assassino?" (Restoration Assassin?). The Vatican's indirect reply came at a conference on can's municut reply came at a conference on restoration held by Italy's National Re-search Council in early November. At the conference Colahuci and Fabrizio Mancinelli, curator for Byzantine, medieval and modern art at the Vatican Museums, explained the safeguards built into the restoraplanted the sateguards built into the restora-tion effort. The standing-room-only crowd of scholars, technicians and officials ap-planted loudly, repeatedly. For Colalucci this was a sign that despite the increasing dissent in some quarters, his project still has broad support broad support Praise greeted the first phases of the 12year project, which aims at cleaning away the centuries of dust, soot and grease that have accumulated on the surface of Michelangelo's masterpiece. The effort was undertaken partly because Vatican restorers were concerned that the ceiling was suffering from water damage and peeling paint in some places. However, they also realized a cleaning could substantially enhance the apearance of the frescoes. And although some scholars might have found it difficult to reconcile the brilliant colors of the newly cleaned frescoes with the traditional conception of a Michelangelo who favored form and line over color, almost no one initially questioned the integrity of the project.

Complaints from recent opponents are as diverse as the theories on how Michelangelo painted. One critic argues that the restorers may be removing a layer of brushstrokes that the painter applied a secco, after the wet paint on wet plaster had dried. Another critic charges that Michelangelo might have used candle soot and animal fat to create murky shadows on his frescoes.

The objections generally focus on two points: whether Michelangelo's work is be-ing altered by the cleaning solvent, and since 1960. "There is nothing in particular that I worry about, but still the mood is very heavy. It's a shame too. We're beginning work on a picture that is extraordinarily beautiful and at the highest technical level. This should be exciting but instead I'm wor-

One of Colalucci's worries these days is James Beck, the chairman of the department of art history and archaeology at Columbia University and a scholar of Renaissance art. In an article in the October issue of Arts magazine, Beck raised a warning about the long-term effects of the restoration. "Would it not be safer and sounder to wait, even as long as a generation, if necessary," he wrote, "to a time when the techniques are in such a state that even the most subtle applications of substances that Michelangelo may have applied himself to unify and consolidate the work could be preserved, if indeed there are any? What is the hurry anyway; no one has claimed that the frescoes are in imminent

Beck, who states that "until quite recently I counted myself among those favorably impressed with the enterprise," writes that he became alarmed when he saw Raphael's "Isaiah" in Rome's Sant'Agostino Church and the 14th-century frescoes - not by Michelangelo - on the side walls of the Sisting Chanel that had been restored less than 10 years ago. Recalling that when he had seen them immediately after restoration, these paintings had seemed fresh and vivid, Beck said that they now seemed "undistinguished and flat."

Beck's dissent has had an impact at the Vatican for several reasons. For one, none of the other critics enjoy Beck's academic cre-

of the Arts in the Vatican Museums and other similar organizations in the United States provide highly valued support, according to museum officials. Despite the fact that Italian art scholars have expressed far more caustic criticism of the restoration, Beck's critique seems to have affected Colalucci the most because it comes from an early enthusiast and a respected colleague.

"All of the people who supported us at first still support us," said Colalucci, then referring to Beck as "Protico penetito," the only one who has repented. Beck, however, notes in his article that he is not alone, and that others have issued warnings similar to his. Colalucci argues than while Beck can voice opinions based on subjective observations, "All I can do is present the facts. And these facts are based on the hundreds of individual analyses and photographs examining the frescoes and the layers of material that have accumulated on top of them. This, plus my daily exposure to the frescoes for the past six years, is what I rely on."

Sitting in his office in the Vatican Muse-uma Pinacoteca, which houses paintings and apestries from the 11th to the 19th centuries, Colatuca recently responded to the points raised by Beck in the Arts magazine article and in subsequent statements. The restorer agreed with the professor that there are pollutants in the air today that did not exist when Michelangelo was at work on the chapel, but he said studies show there are no short-term dangers. Moreover, he said, it is maccurate to say the cleaning robbed the frescoes of their protection and leaves them more vulnerable than before

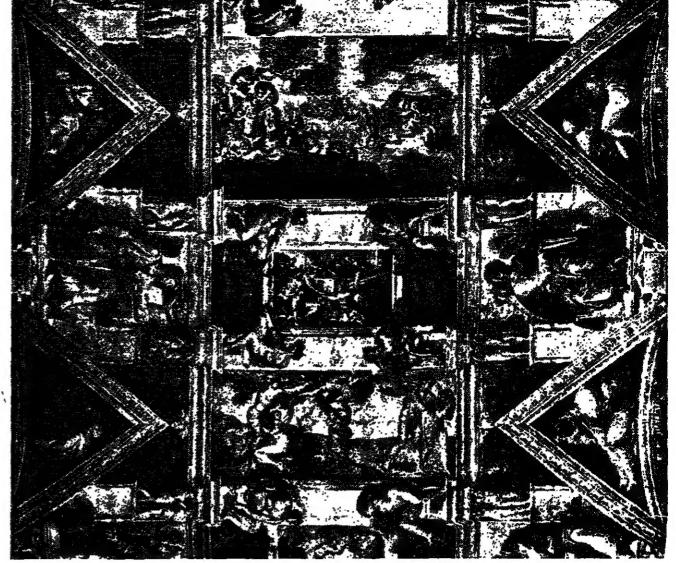

Frescoes were created with absolutely no otection," he said. They are not like paintngs that are finished with a layer of varnish. There is nothing added to them. When they are produced perfectly they are the most int art form that exists."

Colaincci insisted that the extensive studies conducted before and during the restoration indicated there was no danger in cleaning the paintings. In particular, he argued, the tests show that none of Michelangelo's work is being removed. For example, micromples of any a secce painting are tested for the presence of zinc white. A positive reading is a sure sign the paint is not Michelangelo's because paint using that substance was not invented until the 18th century.

As for the 20th century, efforts have been made to ensure that the frescoes will not be inordinately bombarded by the wide range of today's pollutents. The Vatican has proee separate controls. The first, already installed, is a floor board covered by a special dust-absorbing carpet. It covers the staircase leading to the chapel and part of the chapel floor. Another is a soon-to-be-installed an environmental control system.

Colalucci raised strong objections to Beck's idea of halting restoration for a reassessment or in anticipation of new technologies. He maintained this would be "foolishness that could ruin the works." There would be a great risk in doing only a partial restoraaesthetic damage to the frescoes. One section would look so different from another, as one would be much dustier." As an assurance ziers, the frescoes have been subject to rethat restoration was not causing damage visible over time he suggested examination of the frescoes cleaned at the start of the project nearly six years ago. "Go see them," he urged. "They're still there, and they are

As Colalucci sees it, the controversy over the restoration effort and, in particular, its instigators can be divided into two parts; one reasonable, the other decidedly not. There are people who don't accept the cleaning and can't accept new image of Michelangelo," he noted.

While Colalucci respects those who refuse to accept the idea of a "new" Michelangelo, he brusquely rejects those who claim that the frescoes might be damaged by the restoration or those who say the restorers could be removing touch-ups painted by the Renais-

In addition to soot from candles and brapeated interventions dating perhaps as far back as the late 16th century. The frescoes, Colalucci said, were altered by heavy-handed restorers like Annibale Mazzuoli who, from 1710 to 1713, cleaned them with Greek wine and then touched them up with tempera paints. "You cannot talk about the Sistine Chapel as if it were an Etruscan tomb, discovered only yesterday exactly as Michelangelo left it," he said. "As restorers, we have had to deal with what came to us and we face some very complex situations up

Given the complexity of his task Colalucci emphasizes a distinction between the philosophy of art and the science of restoration the art historian versus the art restorer. "Restorers, like myself, must know everything that art historians know plus much more." To be an art historian, Colalucci explained, doesn't necessarily mean that one is an expert on the materials that make up a work of art. "The only people qualified to be making statements about possible risks to the frescoes," he said, "are those who can look into a microscope and tell the difference between the color green, for example, used by Michelangelo and a color of nearly the exact same hue but which never appeared on Michelangelo's palette. Or, those persons," be continued, "who can recognize whether a brush stroke is Michelangelo or that of Mazzuoli."

For Colalucci, the future seems to offer little relief from worry. "I feel like a soccer player before the championship game these days," he said with resignation. "I wish I could go on a retreat and be entirely cut off from the world, so that I could concentrate on what I have to do and not these other things. This all creates a kind of stress which doesn't let you work with tranquillity."

nal Herold Tribune PARIS — Deniel Barenboim is scheduled to conduct the next new production of Wagner's "Ring der Nibelungen" tetralogy at the Bayreath Festival in 1988, a danuting prospect in an age when fewer and fewer conductors have a chance to grow up with it in the opera house. So he has been including it, a bit at a time, in his programs with the Orchestre de Paris — the latest chapter being an ex-hilarating, splendidly cast third act of "Siegiried."

There is a lot to be said for this approach, aside from giving Baren-boim a chance to warm up for Bayrenth. The final act of "Siegfried" is one of the most musically rich but theatrically static in all the "Ring." so it is particularly suitable for the concert format. It fits in with the tich Germanic diet the orchestra and its public have been getting during the decade of Barenboam's musical directorate. And the Paris public, long without a complete staged "Ring" cycle on home ground, is hungry for all it can get. (Admittedly, this has included Radio France's complete "Ring" in concert last season under Marek Janowski.)

Barenboim, who makes no secret about his admiration for the great and often idiosyncratic conductors of the past (Furtwangler, Klemperer & Co.), and his orchestra have string sound, but there are compensations, and on Thursday at the Salle Pleyel the orchestra was in excellent form on its own terms and responsive to Barenboim's demands. If these demands tended to emphasize the episodic aspect rather than the grand design, that is inherent in an act that is itself episodic and being presented out of context. And if the sound of the orchestra on stage sometimes drowned the singers, the sunken pit at Bayrouth will take care of that.

Vocally, this music could hardly be better represented, especially since Wotan and Siegfried could appear fresh instead of at the end of a long evening. Donald McIntyre, with craggy profile and snowy beard, and his warm bass-baritone dense with experience, is a Wotan still formidable but ready to lay down the weight of the world. Siegfried Jerusalem might have trouble with the orchestra in the Act 1 forging of the sword, but here he was well nigh perfect — handsome, lyrical and youthful, yet with ample power. Elizabeth Laurence was the exemplary Erda, implacable in de-meanor and in the deployment of her rich contralto.

Vietnam Says It Killed 1,500 Chinese at Border

BANGKOK -- Hanoi radio reported Friday that Vietnamese forces have killed 1,500 Chinese soldiers in border battles this week. In Beijing, a Foreign Ministry

Although the Chinese spokes-man would not elaborate on his ence statement, the ministry on Wednesday dismissed earlier namese claims of 500 Chinese dead as "boasting" and an attempt to deceive Vietnamese and world public opinion.

In its account of the fighting on Wednesday, China said that its forces repulsed Vietnamese attacks and that more than 200 Vietnamese soldiers had been killed.

Diplomats said that Hanoi's 1,500 figure, if confirmed, would be the highest since the countries fought a brief war in 1979. The two sides have had intermittent clashes since then, and both sides have blamed the other for starting the latest fighting. In its Friday broadcast, monitored here, the Hanoi radio said, While our government is clearly showing its goodwill and desire for peace and friendship with the Chi-

A Victnamese Embassy spokes-man in Beijing said Friday that he did not know whether the three days of fighting had continued be-youd Wednesday.

Western diplomats in Beijing were skeptical about the accuracy of the Vietnamese casualty esti-mates, although they indicated that there had been serious fighting.

The diplomats said the timing of the fighting, if initiated by China, might be linked to political developments that are putting increasing pressure on Vietnam to break the passe over Cambodia.

The Soviet Union appealed to the new team of Vietnamese leaders to renew a dialogue with Beijing. But China has said that better ations depend on Vietnam pulling its forces out of Cambodia, where they are helping the Heng Samrin administration against a guerrilla coalition.

The diplomats said the Chinese could be seeking to drive this point home by launching a strong attack against the Vietnamese.

Thai and Western officials in Bangkok said the border fighting was among the worst between the two countries since 1979. Vietnam said China fired 60,000 mortar rounds and artillery shells up to 11 miles (18 kilometers) into its territory on Wednesday. This would rival major World War II by the Ministry of Home Affairs that his long-standing application for a renewal of his work permit, which expired June 19, had been refused. The ministry told Mr. Cowell to leave South Africa not leave the later than Jan. 10.

Since June 19, Mr. Cowell had been able to work in South Africa because his application for a new work permit was under consideration by the authorities.

Mr. Cowell, 39, is a British subject who has worked as a staff correspondent for The New York Times since 1981, first in Nairobi, and then in Johannesburg. He was reviously a correspondent for Reuters in West Germany, Turkey, Lebanon, Zambia and Zimbabwe.

The decision to order him to ave South Africa apparently was made by Stoffel Botha, minister of home affairs. The minister was asked directly by The Times and through diplomatic channels by U.S. officials to reconsider his decision, but declined three times.

The newspaper's editors offered to meet with him in South Africa to discuss any problems, but the authorities turned down the sagges-tion. A request to reconsider Mr. memann's status was rejected.

The first notice to The Times came less than two weeks after the authorities announced a tightening of censorship rules in force since an emergency decree took effect June 12, 1985.

The rules forbid unauthorized reporting of actions by the security forces and what are deemed "subversive statements." The new rules also oblige reporters to leave scenes of violence and to submit reports

South African government officials, speaking privately, said that the authorities, confronted by American sanctions and by divestment by American corporations in South Africa, felt they derived no benefit from accrediting a correspondent of The New York Times.

The South African officials said their government had already suffered from what it perceived as adverse publicity in the United States and felt able to withstand any further American criticism inspired by the suspension of The New York

Times bureau's reporting. ■ Bombing at Store

South Africa accused the African National Congress of planting a bomb that ripped through an eightstory department store in central Johannesburg on Friday, seconds after hundreds of shoppers had been evacuated, Renters reported.

Policemen at the scene said scores of casualties were prevented by an alert security guard who spotted the bomb in a plastic bag less than 10 minutes before the blast at the OK Bazaars Store, where management and black workers are having a wage dispute.

The Shiite Amal movement blamed the Christian militias, the Lebanese Forces, for the shelling of the airport and accused the Christians of lobbing shells into the southern suburbs ringing the airport grounds.

The Lebanese Forces denied that their militia was behind attacks against the airport. The Christian Voice of Lebanon reported that Amal was rocketing Christian strongholds.

Despite the exchange of accusations, the exact source of fire was difficult to determine. Lebanese Army, Christian militia, Palestinian guerrilla and Druze hilltop po-sitions are spread across the hills overlooking the airport from the southeast to the northeast.

Christian demands for authorization to begin operations at a still nonfunctional airstrip at Haiat along the northern Lebanese coast have been suspected as a prime motivation for blocking air transport from the Beirut airport, which is in the heart of Shiite Moslem territory.

Aegotiations Between Signor Crispi and the Chanceller.

THE EASTERN QUESTION AGAIN.

[BY TELEGRAPH TO THE BERALD.] FRIEDRICHERUM, Oct. 3, 1887.—Signor Crispi, accompanied by his secretaries left here at eight o'clock this morning. Prince bispark and count Herbert Bismark accompanied the Italian Premier to the railway station, walking with him to the door of the saloon carriage. Count de Lamay, the Italian Ambassador, has returned to Berlin.

According to a special Berlin telegram, to-lay's Figure, the Bulgarian question was raised at the Friedrichard interview. and settled in a sense favorable to Russia Prince Imeritimsky, and not General Ernrath, is said to belikely to go to Bulgaria

Another special Viennese telegram states that a triple alliance was signed at the

A PROJECTED RECONCILIATION OF THE VATICAN AND QUIRINAL. [BY TELEGRAPH TO THE RESALD.]

Roxe, October 8, 1887. I am able to confirm the rumor that Signor Crispi's mysterious journey to Freidrichsruh is directly connected with an attempt to settle the Roman question. Bulgarian affairs may be touched on incidentally in the conferences of the Chaucellor and the Italian Premier; but the main object of Prince Bismarck when he encouraged-if indeed he did not invite-Signor Crispi to undertake his journey was to prepare a reconciliation of the Pope and King Humbert, and so re-unite German Catholics and Protestants.

Prince Bismarck has, from politic reasons, long been manosuvering to obtain the advantages attaching to the position of reconciliation.

A few days ago King Humbert was officially, though secretly, informed that the Chancellor would be glad to confer with Signor Crispi on various matters of international importance, and letting it be understood that one of the these matters might be connected with the long-talked

This is all that can be learnt with certainty with regard to the Friedrichsruh interview; but there is reason to believe that the basis of the reconciliation suggested was to be the cossion to the Pope of all, or part, of Rome situate on the left bank of the Tiber.

WHAT HE USED TO SAY. WEAT HE USED TO SAY.

Some months since, in a conversation with Mgr. Galimberti at Vienna, I sounded that able diplomat as to the likelihood of such an arrangement being accepted by the Vatican. Speaking perhaps with the remembrance of the recent diplomatic successes of the Catholic Church in Germany strong in his mind, the Papal Nuncio remarked: "This would evidently not suffice for the dignity of the Holy See." auffice for the dignity of the Holy See."

I have no reason to think that the Pope is inclined to be more yielding now than last apring. At the same time Leo XIII w add scarcely refuse to negotiate on the basis of the restoration of the "Leonine"

City.
What alterior interest Prince Bismarch may have in raising the Roman question at this particular moment remains to be seen; but it is, at least, probable that his chief aim is to ensure Germany's being able to show a united front to France in able to show a united front to France in the control of foreign controllers. the possible event of foreign complica-

LONDON NOTES.

GOSSIP IN THE CITY AND IN POLITICAL AND SOCIAL CIRCLES. [ST THE HERALD'S SPECIAL WIRE.]

LONDON, OCT. 4, 1887. A strong article in The Army and Navy Magazine published to-day shows decidedly, if its facts and statistics are true, that the recent cession to Russia of frontier land by the Afghan Commission at the instigation of Sir West Ridgway, one of its members and now successor to Sir Redvers

Buller at Dublin Castle, really gives the Russians the key to Herat and Candiliar. This is because the ceded territory constitutes a camping ground for a Russian isrmy of 150,000 men and with fertile supplies. The article bristles with startling facts as to the blunder. THE PRESIDENT TRIP.

A VERY UNPLEASANT INCIDENT AT TER-RA HAUTE.

[BY COMMERCIAL CARLE TO THE REPAID.] NEW YORK, Oct. 3, 1887.

In Indianapolis Saturday, President Cleveland was escorted from the cars to the State House by a civic and military procession, where, in the presence of 25,000 people, he was welcomed by Governor Gray. He then received the people in the State House Rotunds, and after lunching at the residence of Senator Macdonald, he left for Terre Haute.

WELCOMED EVERYWEERE. At the latter city an address of welcome New England.

was made by Richard Thompson. The President made a brief address to the populace and took the train for Saint Louis, where he arrived after midnight. On his way to the station in Terre Haute a middle aged enthusiast grasped the president's carriage from behind. The driver whipped up and tried to leave him, but in vain.

FURCE OF KIND WORDS. The President's escort ordered the man away, but he energetically refused. Two or three of the mounted men tried to ride him down, but he carse I them savagely and refused to leave the side of the carriage. Mrs. Cleveland turne I to him and said: -" I'lease let go, sir"; and the fellow dropped off as if he had been shot, and alipped away in the darkness. From Terre Hante to St. Louis the Ourney was made without incident. The President and his suit will leave

THAT VISIT TO BERLIE.

In a recent conversation with M. de Schloezer, he laid great stress on this point of his policy. On the occasion of Mgr. Galimberti's visit to Berlin last spring, the Chancellor took the opportunity of inaking it known to the Pontiff that he took a very real interest in the Roman question, and subsequently outlined his policy in a semi-official communication to the Visican.

A few days ago King Humbert was officially, though secretly, informed that the Chancellor would be glad to confer with Signor Crispi on various matters of international importance, and letting it be feature of the one of the context with secret of the series to be given in the church rooms, 19 Avenue de l'Alma, under the direction of Mr. C. Lawrence Seker, took place last night before a fair and appreciative audience. The artists were Miss O'Rorke, Miss Hooper, Mr. F. Luchx (sommetly of the Opera Comique), Mr. S. Magnus, Mr. Danvers, Mr. Ernest Wood, Mr. George Mac-Master, Mr. J. Humphreys, Mr. Parkinson, Mr. Stephen P. Barter, Mr. G. Chaffer M. Fiddle Koenig and Mr. R. Meyrick Roberts. Miss O'Rorke saug "La Favorite" with feeling and power. Two scenes from the fifth act of "The Hunchback," interpreted by Miss Hooper was sweet and girlish in the part feature of the entertainment. Miss Hooper was sweet and girlish in the part of Helen. Mr. Dauvers was excellent as the lover, and his repeated appearances with Miss Hooper in private theatricals have been much appreciated by their

OF A STOKER. A fatal secident occurred on Sunday on board her Majesty's ship Temeraire shortly after she had anchored at Spithead, on arrival from the Mediterranean station with relieved crews. While the steam pineace was being hoisted out on the starboard bow, ready for lowering when required, a hook of the purchase suddenly gave way, with the result that the craft was precipitated into the water, sinking stern foremost. There was three men in the pinnsce—a stoker named Finch, who was in the stoke hol: getting ready the fires, and two alto seamon who were adjust-ing the tackle. Perceiving the danger in time, the seamen jumped into the water, receiving some hurt in doing so, but Finch was mable to extricate himself from his positio, and it is believed that he received positio, and it is believed that he received a heavy blow on the head from some of the falling tackle, which dashed out his brains. As she fell almost perpendicularly, the pinnace glanced against the protruding muzzle of a Nordenfelt gun, and the force of the contact occasioned some structural damage, several large splinters flying in all directions. Finch sank with the pinnace. damage, several large splinters flying in all directions. Finch sank with the pulmace. As soon as the two seamen had been rescued a signal was made to the dockyard for a diver, who commenced his work as soon as possible. He discovered the pinnace bottom upwards, but no immediate efforts could be made to raise her, and like the ball had a to raise her, and Finch's body had not last night been

AN ANABCHIST PRISONER TRIED WITH CLOSED DOORS.

BY TELEGRAPH TO THE REBALD. LEIPzie, Oct. 3, 1887.—The case of the anarchist Christopher Neve, accused of high treason, came on for trial at nine o'clock this morning. A large force of policy was in attendance to preserve order. The prisoner, who in his examination persisted in denying his identity with the anarchist Neve admitted it to-day. Herr Tessendorff demanded that the proceedings should be held with closed doors to which the court assented on the ground that the publicity

Buoyancy Causes Suspicion.

Mr. Addison Cammack and some of the other principal bear leaders took to selling St. Paul to-day and knocked down that s'ock 21/2 per cent. The result was that the whole stock list took a tumble of about one per cent., and some stocks got down our per cent lower still. Western Uni in Telegraph, however, didn't drop. There is a suspicion in the street that its strange buoyancy was preserved in benefi: from her stay in Scotland up to this, although she somewhat keenly feels the chill breezes that blow in the North. It may be easily imagined that, Spaniard as she is, the Empress scurely likes the cold climate of the Highlands. The Queen and the Ex-Empress are much together. Her Majesty has some difficulty in inducing the Empress to drive out with her. Her Majesty is a lover of fresh air, and except for very heavy rain, will never allow her carriage to be closed, and the Empress knowing this, invariably tries to

The Empress is never so happy Beatrice. The Empress is never so happy as when in the nursery at Balmoral, pet ing the little Prince of Battenberg. The funeral ceremony at Farnbornugh will take place soon after the return of the Empress from Scotland. Everything is in readiness at the chapel which the Empress has caused to be built for the reception of the bodies of her husband and son.

During the last fortuight London has been unusually full for September. It is generally supposed that this is the most mashionable month, next to August, in the Metropolis; but certainly an exception must be made this year. A good many of the arrivals in town are doubtless owing to the cold weather, which has driven home some of the less hardy plossure seckers; and it must be remembered, too that the secretary belief. too, that the season, though a brilliant one, ended early. Still, after all allow-ances are made under those heads, it is plain that Society does not intend to let autumnal London remain the desolate wilderness it was of yore.

AMERICAN NOTES.

It was reported in Wall-street vester-day that Jay Gould would saif for Europe about the middle of next month. It was said specifically that his yacht Atalanta would be sent over, and if it reached the other side safely Mr Gould would follow on an ocean steamship. The length of his trip varied in the street rumors from after weeks to six months or a year.

The steamship Alesia, of the Fabre line, came up to Quarantine yesterday morning with the most startling hill of health that has been seen at this port for over twenty years. According to the ship's doctor's statement, six storrage passengers and two seamen had died of Asiatic cholers on the voyage from the Mediterranean, and four more passengers were down with the same fatal and infectious discuse. Counting in the officers and crew, there were 609 persons aboard, all of whom were dangerously threatened with the plague. No time was lost in turning the steamer back to the Lower Bar and putting the passengers and crew under the strictest quarantine rules. Some time ago Mrs. John Hostetter, of Perry County, Pa., gave birth to triplets, two boys and a girl. The parents decided to call them Grover, Cleveland and Frances, respectively. A letter was written to the President, to which he sent the following reply:

He had been ill for years, and at a'clock. He had been ill for years, and at times his illness had taken alarming turns and threatened to terminate his existence. A gunshot wound through the lung, received at Winchester, gave him great trouble. Through exposure he contracted pneumonia several years ago, and it left him with a painful cough. His constitu-tion was a strong one, and his recaperative powers astonished the physicians who from time to time saw him rally from assaults of disease that would have struck down most men not enfeebled as he was by wounds received in battle.

A CARGO OF CRIMINALS.

Five hundred convicts, says the Figure, have just sailed from Toulon on the Orne. boundfor Cayenne. Eighty-seven of them are "lifers," and of these nine had been sentenced to death. Among the convicts are a count, who had murdered his mother. Delmazure, the ghoul who descented the tombs of Montmartre cemetery: Leoni, who killed several soldiers; Sicard, the fratticide; and a great many other interesting criminals. As the convoy was being taken on board in chains, Sicard savagely assaulted one of the guard and made desperate attempt to escape. He was not mastered till he had been threatened with a bullet in his head.

Universal Interest Regarding the Political Campaign.

TRAVELLING IRISH ORATORS.

Very Little Hope of Another Race With the Thistle.

HORRIBLE LONG ISLAND MUNDER.

The Rev. Dr. Parker of the London Temple in Plymouth Church.

[BY COMPERCIAL CASILE TO THE REBALD.] New York, Oct. 3, 1887.

The coming political cumpaign, from outset, has promised to be lively; but an element has now been added that will materially increase its interest. The Anarchists were kicked out of the Labor Convention by Mr. Heury George and Herr Shevitch. The leader of the expelled Auarchists, has challenged Henry George to a public debate. George has accepted, and if the liveliest kind of row is not the result politicians will be mistaken.

THE LABOR CONVENTION The annual assembly of the Knights of Labor will be convened in Minneapolis to-morrow. Great inte est centres in the election of a Master Workman. President Master Workman Powderly is too conservative to please the more advanced members. A strong opposition will attempt to ourt him and elect a Master Workman more given to ordering agrices. The present outlook however stanger favors the success of Mr. Powderly and the conservative element. GOING INTO BUSINESS An effort will be made to get Knights of Labor to take some action regarding the Chicago suarchists now under sentence of murder, and also to induce the order as a body to carry on a co-operative establishment. The Knights are now doing that in Minnesota, where in one place alone they have accumulated a quarter million dollars' worth of property, and do a million dollars' worth of husiness rearly. PAVITY AND BOAM. Michael Davitt has reached Chicago where he and Patrick Egan, the leader of the Lish sympathisers in this country and president of the National Land League: of America were cuthusiastically received.

TO TALK FOR INCLAND. Sir Heury Grattan Esmond, or, as the afternoon papers will jusist upon calling him, "Mr. Esmond," has turned up in New York with Mr. Arthur O'Connor. They are at the Hoffman House. They are both announced to plead for Incland in Boston, Lowell, Jersey City, Philadelphia, Chicago, St. Louis and San Francisco, but they don't intend to give the English Government a chance of catching them up in Canada.

(IV) ENOUGH

There is much talk at the New York Yacht Club over probable bringing over here by Mr. Sweet of a seventy foot water line cutter to win the America Cup, neat season. If this is done, a keel boat of the same size, will be built here by Burgess to beat ber. The proposal of the Larchmont Yacht Club of New York to give a thousand dollar cap for the four big single will not sail unless the Volunteer caters, which the Larchmont Club objects to, saving that it is "the same as presenting the Volunteer with a $1,000 cup, as the Volunteer evidently can't be beaten by the Thistle."

NOTABLE VISITORS. Lord Herschell, with Lady Herschell, are in Philadelphia after a plessant overland trip from San Francisco. They are accompanied by Mr. Charles Buller and Victor R. Williamson of London.

EWEENEY IN NEW YORK. Peter B. Sweeney is in New York today, and insists that he is here only on personal business, and though many knowing ones hint that his advice will be quietly sought by the democratic politicians in convection with the coming campaign, Sweeney says he returns to Paris before the election. THE MANITOBAND DOWNED.

Winnipeg's famous railmed to the United States boundary, according to a dispatch to the New York Times, has fizzled out at last, and the Canadian Pacific Railway has scored a great triumph over the people of Manitoha. Owing to a lack of fands, the constructor has thrown up his contract and given notice to stop work. There is very latter feeling in Manitoba ov r the matter.

defeat of all English yachts that have competed for the America Cup. A London paper yesterday under belief that the triangular race was yet to be contested echoed the opinion of Mr. Bell, the owner of the Thistle, that in a triangular or four-sided race he could defeat the American yacht. Our own opinion is that the Volunteer can outsail the Thistle in a triangular, quadrangular, octangular, rectangular, or any other kind of race and at any angle, but it will be necessary for our English cousins to win one out of the three races for the America cup before it is likely to be proved to the national satisfaction.

THE ENGLISH PRESS. GENEROUS CONTRIBUTION IN DANGER OF BEING REFUSED.

Alluding to the munificent offer of £600,000 made by the Nizam of Hyderabad towards the military defence of the frontier, the Times remarks:

The continued success of Ayoob Khan,

The continued success of Ayoob Khan, as reported by our correspondent, in cluding capture makes the situation in Afghanistan one which may at any time become threatening to the peace of India. Ayoob is supposed to be preparing for a dash at Herat, where he would probably find a large number of partisans. It is satisfactory, in view of such a possibility, to know that the Ameer is not displaying supineness. His impending visit to Candahar is evidently calculated to deal a crushing blow at the rebellions Ghilmis, and at the same time to place him within striking distance of Herat, should Ayoob establish himself there. It is even rumored that the Ameer intends is even rumored that the Ameer intends to make Candahar his capital, and no doubt this city is advantageously situated for keeping a tight hand upon that troublesome portion of his dominions, of which Herat is the centre. We may at any moment find ourselves com-mitted to defend Afghanistan and India itself from Russian aggression, and every assistance from our Indian fendatories is of value, not only for the material thelp, but as ranging native sentiment upon our side. It is possible that the generosity of the Nizam may not find imitators among the less powerful native princes; but, unless his offer meets with the princes of the heads of an unfortunate reception at the hands of the Indian Government, the strong pro-bability is that his example will be fol-lowed by those chiefs whose good will it is our chief policy to callst in favor of British rale.

MEVER WILL BE SLATES (From the Standard.)

The long-pending dispute regarding the right of way to the summit of "Skiddak's Cuh" culminated on Saturday in the Keswick Footpaths Preservation Society removing the barriers which the proprietor had thrown across the path, and had thrown across the peth, and marching triumpliantly to the top of the hill. The "constructive illegality" was committed in as orderly a manner as pos-sible. Two thousand people took part in the formality, and among them was must be approached carefully Mr. Samuel Plimsoff, who, we may take it, will be one of the Defendants in the action which it was the object of Saturday's lings to precipitate. So far, the proceedings to precipitate. So far, therefore, the people of the district are to be congratulated on the comparatively orderly manner in which they have taken the first step in the vindication of a public right. They sang, we are told, "Rule Britannia" with exceeding ferror, and made the dales ring with the deciarations that, they "average would be said to the said of the said to the said that they "average would be said to the said that they "average would be said to the said that they are not to the said that they are not said to the said that they are not said to the said that they are not said to said the said that they are not said to said the said that they are not said the said that they are not said that they are said to said the said that they are said that they are said to said the said that they are said to said the said that they are said that they are said they are said they are said that they are said that they are said they are said that they tions that they "never, never would be slaves." The latter part of the programme might perhaps have been omitted. For might perhaps have been omitted. For though the object of the Society has at heart is in every way landable, it requires a good deal of local enthusiasm to imagine that there is any question of "slavery" involved in a friendly dispute as to the public access to a Cumberland hill. Now that the materials for a test case are provided, it is hoped that, once and for all, the rights and the wrongs of the dispute will be actiled before a tribunal for all, the rights and the wrongs of the dispute will be actiled before a tribunal more impartial than the public opinion of Keswick and its neighbourhood. The question is, indeed, one of long standing. The proprietor of the Great Bauk Estate, of which Latrigg, or "Skiddaw's Cub," forms a part, takes one view of the matter. The public at large hold another, and not long ago took means identical with those of Saturday to protest against his interpretation of ancient. identical with those of Saturday to protest against his interpretation of ancient wont and usage. Barriers were reared, and quietly removed. But for some reason the proprieter does not seem to have considered the people who had constituted the selves defendants in this formal trespass sufficiently substantial to hear the brunt of a law suit. Hence the constitute of the proceedings on Saturrepetition of the proceedings on Saturday. A few days earlier the same Society as that concerned in vindicating Society as that concerned in vindicating the right of way to the summit of Latrigg broke down the obstructions in the read leading from Nichol Ending in the direction of Silver Hill, which, it is contended, had been arbitrarily closed by the owner of the Fawe Park Estate. At this was the second time that access to one of the finest views of Derwentwater had been thus forcibly opened, the Keswick Footpaths Preservation Association may region on a here. vation Association may reckon on a busy time this Winter. But as we presume they are prepared for this, every one, the proprietors whose rights have been dis-puted among the rest, is to be congratulated on the prospect of having a matter so important to thousands of holiday-makers settled by a more judicial tribunal than two thousand slatesmen singing "Rule Britannia."

Sir Charles Gavan Duffy's Constitutional Scheme Discussed with its Author.

PARNELLITE ADHESIONS

a Final Settlement of the Irish Question.

Sir Charles Gavan Duffy, the statemanauthor of "A History of Young Irrland," has just passed through Paris on his way to the Riviera. I took the opportunity of interviewing him with regard to his " Plan of a Fair Constitution for Ireland," which he explained in a remarkable article in the current number of the Contemporary Review.

The chief points in the plan it will be remembered were as follows :-- An Irish Parliament remaisting of a Senate and a Lower House, would sit in Dublin. The Lower House would consist of 105 members: the Senate of 54 members. The Senate would be partly elected, partly nominated by the Sovereign (under the advice of her responsible Irish Ministers). Minorities would be ensured a fair representation, proportionate to their numerical importance in the country. The Lord-Lieutenant would continue to act as the Queen of Ireland's delegate, with the right of Veto.

THE PLAN APPROVED.

The bokiness of the scheme, which, as Sir Charles Gavan Duffy frankly stated, was intended not for the benefit of only Nationalists or Unionists, but for the contentment of all parties in Ireland. ensured it widespread attention. But probably even its author himself hardly hoped it would have had a more than academic success. It would seem, how-ever, that the plan has made a marked improved the minds of the conimpression upon the minds of many pro-minent Irish and not a few English poli-tical men; while certain well-known Irish-American Nationalists, if we may judge from the opinions ther expressed at the time of Mr. Gladstone's Bill, would be prepared to accept it as a final settlement of the Irish question.

"How has your plan been received in Ireland and England, Sir Charles?" said I.

"In Ireland," said Sir Charles, "it has received the assent of several the assent of several the assent of several the sev received the assent of several of the men whom the people would most certainly follow. In England, some of the leading members of the late Gladstone Ministry have approved its main principles. 1 rearet approved its main principles. I re-gret it is not possible to mention names. Sixty or eighty important English papers have devoted articles to the plan. Many have disapproved it, but none have treated it disrespectfully. While the chief Irish Conservative organ has declared that, though it does not want any Home Rule at all, yet if Home Rule must come, it would regard the guarantees for the pro-fection of the Protestant minority as -satisfactory." WHAT THE PARKELLITER SAY. Does the Parnellite party approve it? Yes, certainly. Leading men of the Parnellite party are prepared to accept my Parietino party are prepared to accept my proposals; and none have expressed any absolute dissent from it. The proposal to have two Houses instead of a single Legislative Council has been especially and cordially approved; and though my plan for the nomination of the Irish tension is not resistantly approached the Schators is not universally accepted, the majority of those to whom it has been referred are favourable. "No you really think, Sir Charles, that the plan—in its broad lines—would be accepted as a final settlement, or only with an orrière penet, as a step towards complete independence?

Lt is impossible to give a satisfactory reply to that question. But my firm con reply to tast question. But my arm conviction is that such a settlement would be final. Mobody, I repeat, has raised any serious objections to it, except a few English Radicals who dislike the idea of having two Chambers."
"What does Mr. Davitt say to the neme: "He has made no utterance on the subject: but my impression is that he disapproves of having two Irish Chambers.

This would probably he his chief objection." This would probably be his chief objection."

"How is it that, putting the press out of the question, there has been no public pronouncement on the plan in Ireland?"

"The Coercion Bill was just coming into operation when the plan was published, and Irishmen had more pressing matters to think of. I have karnt, however in convergation and by lasters that ever, in conversation and by letter, that the scheme has been widely and favourably considered."

"Have you any reason to believe that the idea of Imperial Federation—to which I see you devote considerable space in the Contemporary—is making headway in Ireland?"

"Well: it's not very important at pre-IS PEDERATION COMING?

well: it's not very important at present whether it is or is not making headway in Ireland. It certainly is doing so in the colonies and among those who rule public opinion in England. People are rapidly coming to the conviction that, to keep the widespread Empire together, there must be a central authority in which the outlying colonies are represented. the outlying colonies are represented."

"Granting this, Sir Charles, would the House of Commons consent to the substi-tution of a Federal assembly for itself?"

"The only reply I can give you is that the House of Commons, like every organized body, objects to relinquishing any of its powers. Only let one strong statesman take up the question, however, and man take up the question, and the make people realize the necessity of the change; and you will find that its objections will hardly seem more respectable, or count for more, than the objections of the Corporation of London to being Supersolol.

Would not your countrymen object to such a close imitation of the English system as you propose?
Not at all. There are wide differences between the two. The provisions for the protection of and proportionate representation of, minorities do not exist in England. Even in Di-caeli's Parliament there was only a handful of minority re-presentatives, whereas by my plan the minority would return one-third of the whole Irish Parliament. The proposed Irish Senate, too, would be very unlike the House of Lords. It would not be a Hereditary House, for example."

OBJECTIONS ANSWERED.
"Would not the Right of Veto be a "I think not more so than in the colonics. Sparingly and fairly used, it would be accepted in Ireland." "Looking at the limited number members in your Lover House, it seems to me there might be some danger of its degenerating into a delating club." I don't apprehend anything of the kind, sir. Irishmen have shown plenty of capacity for governing in various places. So far from being a mere debating club, it would, I believe, be a very vigorous Parliament." Parliament."

Parliament."

"How would your Senators he nominated? By the Queen, I suppose? Would that he agreeable to the Irish?"

"The first Senate would be entirely nominated in the Constitutional Bill; and the character would have been not before this the matter would have been not thoroughly centilated in and out of Parsiliament that there would be no fear of any person objectionable to Ireland stealing

I have only known my countrymen in the colonies and in Ireland, but I have observed that the Irish-Americans. int I have observed that the Irish-Americans have agreed to other matters which the Irish had approved—the Land League was one of them—and I see no reason to doubt they would accept this plan."

Much has been said and written about the "nearness" (to put it mildly), of the present directors of the Paris Opera, House. Signora Tetrazzini could say something on the subject if she chose. A short time ago M. Ritt gave her a trial hearing at the Opera, and, finding she had an admirable vice, offered her an engagement at the magnificent rate of four hundred france a month. Talking of music, I heard a rumour last night that Gounod had been asked to compose some music for the Pope's Sacerdotal Julilee. There is a grain of truth in the report, but the facts have been exaggerated. Gounod lately composed a page of music (16 or 18 bars in all) in the Pope's honour. It is a kind of Virat il Papa! and the original MSs will figure in a glass case at the coming Vatican Exhibition. Hearing of this, the great Milan editor Ricordi wrote to Gounod to know whether he would sell him his author's rights to the composition. Gounod replied that he intended to present his Virat to the Pope, and offered to write something else for Hicordi, apropos of the Jubilee. The result was a commission to compose a short cantata, or symphonic ode, the exact title of which has yet to be chosen.

The lamentable story of Leonard Paillier, the bank messenger, who has just been sentenced to four years imprisonment for stealing 100,000 francs from the Societé Générale, would shake the optimism of a Candide. From the moment he made that little mistake about meus and tuem in Paris, to the hour of his arrest in Darcelona, the luckless Leonard was a victim of his trust in human nature. His lady friends squandered his money. Their husbands borrowed it. His servant endeavoured to betray him to M. Taylor. Finally, in Barcelona, where he had taken refuge, his last 10,000 francis, which he had buried in the floor of his room, mysteriously disappeared. All this room, mysteriously disappeared. All this, doubtless, had its weight with the Court which sentenced him, or he would hardly its have got off with less than the maximum.

For 1987 worldwide, most indicators remain positive, analysts say. But many professional nivestors do not expect another bounding raily.

"In our view it will be treacherous," Mr. Wormley said. "We are going to be cantious." Mr. Testa said that he expected Morgan Stanley's international index to rise 10 to 20 percent in 1987, with overseas markets again outpacing U.S. markets.

U.S. stocks posted their fifth consecutive annual gain in 1986. The Dow Jones industrial average of 30 blue-chip shares surpassed other indicators by rising 22.6 percent. The investment environment was aided by declines in interest rates and oil prices, but analysts could cite no single overwhelming factor for the market's performance.

"One of the most intriguing aspects of the market's rise is the lack of anything to point to to explain it," said Laszlo Birmyi, an analyst at Salomon Brothers Inc.

The leading sectors were tobacco companies, pollution-control equipment companies and metal- and glass-container manufacturers, all up 50 percent or more. On the downside, offshore drillers fell more than 50 percent, while steel companies were off 20 percent and hospital management concerns fell more than 15

Last year was a topsy-turvy one for the Frankfurt stock exchange, as the powerful West German economy shifted gears. Previously driven by exports, the economy came to rely

The shift to domestic consumption caused some industries, such as steel, to suffer. But it aided auto makers and their suppliers. As for 1987, "It's going to be the year of the flexible investor," said Peter Pietsch, an analyst

Linet long age, we received a latter containing the above neutern. The writer, a lady, had been troubled for about eight years with terrible heatsches, burning in the ears, failure of memory, less of apporting, and great nervous debility and prostration. She would go for days, eating actively saything, and could not even drink milk. She had a some of fulnoss or weight in the stomach after any attempt to eat, and was often girly, with the face fushed at times, as though she had a ferrer.

with the face flushed at mann, we among now man of fever.

Her spirits were depressed, and she would go asdiy about the bouns at one does under some great because a summer for the physicians and she tried a change of sir and some, but nothing around to lift the heavy loos. Early in the present year she began using Eashine, called the new quintue. The result surprised her, for she had no move faith in it than in other things that proved good for nothing. In a few works abe was hetter, Her appetite improved, her spirits were as light as when she was a girk, said she went to bed and slept standly and sweetly as a tired child. Size compared her recovery to the strady west wind blowing the storm clouds of the free of the blus sky. Widle taking Kastiow she mad no other medicine.

LONDON - Most sectors of the Eurobond market ended little changed Friday after relatively quitrading but the perpetual float-

In the secondary markets, perpetual issues ended with gains of 1/2 to 2 points on the day. But dealers said that it was difficult to determine precise price levels because only about 12 houses were making markets in the issues, and some of these differed widely.

Some of these bouses are quoting 14-point spreads while others are trading with 14-point spreads. One trader at a house that currently is making firm prices in perpetual deals said, "It's been very busy today, but strangely the market seems to have settled down a little."

Dated FRNs were unchanged to a fraction firmer. But most dealers disagreed with the view that retail money from the perpetual area was being directly reinvested in the dat-at Thursday's close in Tokyo. One dealer said the central bank semed to be the only dollar buyer Some dealers sold dollars as the central bank bought, taking profits while the dollar was stronger. The interest in selling the dollar as reinforced by remarks Thursday in Washington by the U.S. Treasury secretary, James A. Baker 3d, who said that the dollar's decline had been reasonable and orderly and that he did not foresee any risk of a resurgence in inflation because of its decline. The market interpreted the comments to mean that the U.S. Federal Reserve would not intervene in conjunction with the Bank of Japan and that the United States may be looking for a weaker dollar.

EMS: Finance Officials to Discuss Currency Realignment Japan Bank Racing to Build an Empire, Win America's Cup

Two yachts financed by his conglomerate, Parry Corp., are contenders to carry off the trophy when the races end in about five weeks.

A high school dropout, who at lervene in exchange markets 10- age 53 is one of Australia's bestknown businessmen, Mr. Parry is shopping for media and other in-terests in the United States and elsewhere. He is cagey about the shopping list, but he said he recently made an unsuccessful bid of more than $500 million for an American company, which he would not identify.

A short, alightly pudgy man, whose hair is thinning and graying, Mr. Parry decided to compete in the America's Cup races after Mr. Bond, another Australian businessman, triumphed in 1983 and brought the silver Cup to Perth.

"Alan said he didn't think he was going to get any competition worth much, and as a result would be underprepared for the defense of the Cup," Mr. Parry recalled. An in-house study estimated that an attempt to capture the Cup would cost $5 million over three years, so Mr. Parry gave the project the nod. He has kept on nodding as his boats have cost nearly $20 million.

A staff of 100 is operating the Kookaburra boats. Much of the money is going into Mr. Parry's passion, technology, such as computer modeling to study alternative keels and computer analyses of the best sailing tactics under different "He's like Bond in many ways, in that he takes big bites and then digests them and takes a profit at the end of the day," said Gary R. Pearce, also a prom man in Porth. "In all his dealings, Australia Condemns U.S. Barley Subsidies CANBERRA — The Australian government, condemning Washington's decision to subsidize further barley exports to Sandi Arabia, said Friday that the move would drive down the price of Australian barley.

John Dawkins, the trade minister, and John Kerin, the primary industries minister, said in a statement that the move was contrary to Australia's understanding that no further initiatives would be announced during the present United States marketing year, which ends in April.

The U.S. Department of Agriculture has decided to subsidize 1.25 million tons of barley exports to Saudi Arabia, in addition to the 1.25 million tons it had already undertaken to subsidize for 1986-87.

24 Years After That 'Coldest Day' Loss, Giants Aim to Sneak Up on Title

By Dave Anderson

New York Times Service NEW YORK - It's as if that key wind in 1952 blew the New York Giants' season-ticket subscribers away from a championship game for a quarter of a century. Now, finally, they will be able to attend another championship ne - against the Washington Redskins on Sunday at Giants Stadium for the National Conference title. But most of those 64,892 shivering speciators at Yankee Stadium on Dec. 30, 1962, still remembered it as the coldest day of

At the kickoff, the wind blew the ball off the tes three times before it was held. The tempera-le at the kickoff was announced as 18 degrees minus 7.7 centigrade), but it had dropped oclow 10 by the time Jerry Kramer's third field goal clinched the National Football League championship for the Green Bay Packers, 16-7. As Bart Starr approached coach Vince Lowbardi after having been the ball-holder, the Packers' quarterback was too cold to celebrate.

"I think my ears are frozen," Starr said. That wind from left field had gusted up to 50 miles per hour (80 kilometers per hour).

"The ball was like a diving duck," said Y.A. Tittle, the Giants' quarterback. "I threw one pass and it almost came back to me. The short ones worked, but the long ball broke up. We needed the long one."

Tittle had thrown 33 touchdown passes that season. And with a 12-2 record under coach Allie Sherman, the Giants were primed to atone for a 37-0 loss in Green Bay in the 1961 title

But in the gusts of the title game, the Giants' bald 36-year-old quarterback completed only 18 of 41 passes for 197 yards. One of those fluttering passes was deflected by the Packers' Ray Nitschke to another linebacker, Dan Currie, who intercepted. Nitschke also recovered and the Packers' only touchdown

"I don't ever remember being hit so hard," Taylor accused the Giants, notably Sam Huff, of playing dirty by paling on after they had stopped him. "Taylor likes to crawl," Huff snapped. "The only way to stop Taylor is to make sure that he's

The Giants got their only touchdown when Erich Barnes, their left cornerback, blocked a punt and Jim Collier recovered the ball in the end zone. In cold weather then, quarterbacks didn't wear gloves. Neither did any of the other players. But they wore ripple-soled football shoes instead of cleats.

"The cold itself wasn't that bad," Starr said. "We've practiced in 15-below-zero weather in Green Bay and it didn't seem this cold. But the have had a brutal 3-11 record in championship ses - 3-4 at Yankee Stadium and earlier at the Polo Grounds, 0-7 on the road. Four years before that 1962 arctic afternoon, the Giants lost to the Baltimore Colts in overtime, 23-17. But those Giants still think they should have

With a 17-14 lead and slightly more than 2 minutes remaining, the Giants had a third-and-four at their 39-yard line. Halfback Frank Gifford ran a sweep to the right. But in the pileup, Gino Marchetti, the Colts' all-pro defensive end, had an ankle broken.

"I had that first down," Gifford said, "If the referee hadn't been so concerned about helping Marchetti and had marked the ball first, we'd have had the first down and the championshin. But he took so much time getting Marchetti out of the pileup, when he put the ball down we were still a few inches short."

the fans' pleas to go for the first down. Don Chandler punted to the 14, but Johnny Unitss completed four passes, three to Raymond Berry, to position Steve Myhra for a 20-yard field goal with seven seconds remaining. After 8 minutes 15 seconds of overtime, Alan Ameche amashed in from the one-yard line.

In 1956 the Giants won their last champ ship with a 47-7 rout of the Chicago Bears in their first season at Yankee Stadium, where the "DEE-fense, DEE-fense" chant began. That day the Giants were white sneakers supplied by Andy Robustelli, their Hall of Fame defensive and who owned a sporting-goods store.

At the Polo Grounds, the Giants won two NFL titles. In 1938 they stopped the Packers, 23-17, when their Hall of Fame center and linebacker, Mel Hein, returned in the closing minutes after having suffered a concussion in the first half. And in 1934 the Giants stunned the Bears, 30-13, in the first "sneakers" game.

In zero-degree weather that morning, Ray coach Sieve Owen that the players wear sneakers, as his Gonzaga team had a decade earlier on a frozen field. Owen turned to Abe Cohen, a tailor by trade and a locker-room helper who supervised the Manhattan College athletic equipment room.

"Could you rush up to Manhattan," the coach asked, "and get as many pairs of sneakers as

Cohen didn't return until halftime, when the Giants were losing, 10-3. And when the Giants appeared for the second half wearing sneakers, George Halas, the Bears' coach, thought he had

"Step on their toes," Papa Bear growled. But the aneakers enabled Ken Strong to step to two touchdowns. And now, ironically, when the Giants play on artificial turf Sunday with temperatures forecast for the 30s, all the players will be wearing speakers of a sort.

2 Championship Seasons Are Down to 4 Quarters

By Barry Wilner

CLEVELAND - The Cleveland was played like champions during the last six weeks of the National Football League season. The Den-Mironcos played like champions using the first six weeks.

Sunday, at 12:30 P.M. here, they neet for the American Football Conference championship and, said the Browns' tight end, Ozzie Newsome, "It's down to four quarters now. This is as close as we've at and we won't be backing off

En route to this game that will decide who goes to the Super Bowl in Pasadena, California, the Browns won their last five games of the regular season, going 12-4 to post the best record in the conference. Harrah's Race and Sports Book in Reno, Nevada, has installed them as three-point favorites to win Sunday. The Broncos were 6-0 before losing a Monday night game to the New York Jets, then finished at 11-5 after splitting their last 10 games.

"That has no bearing on this me," said the Broncos' coach, Jan Reeves. "I think we are ready or the Browns and, if we play as we

The Broncos and Browns have ndi met since 1984, when Sam Ru-tiglismo was coaching Cleveland and heading for a 1-7 start, which got him fired and Marty Schottenneither hired. Denver won, 24-14. Last Saturday, the Browns ral-lied with 10 points in the final two minutes of regulation time, then beat the Jets, 23-20, in doubte over-

great secondary."

"As for Cloveland's defensive backs, led by All-Pro corner Han-ford Dixon, Reeves said, "Their cornerbacks are very comparable to the [Los Angeles] Raiders' and the Kansas City [Chiefs'] corners, and we think they are the best in the league."

The rally against the Jets rein-forced the Browns' belief that they are the best in the league and heading for their first Super Bowl.
"This is a different team than last year," linebacker Clay Mat-

The 1985 Browns won the AFC Central title with an 8-8 record, the worst of any division winner in NFL history. "We were just happy to be in the playoffs last year," Matthews said. "This time we expett to win, even when we are 10 points behind. We just have a special feeling we can do it."

"Cleveland's improvement centers on a more varied offense under assistant coach Lindy Infante. The Rengers had two 1 000-ward rushers. Browns had two 1,000-yard rushers in Kevin Mack and Earnest Byner Edmonton in 1985, but injuries curtailed their playing this season. They played Coloury Wanties Las Areates together in only one game all year.

Statistically, Kosar had a slightly better season. He threw for 3,854 intercepted 10 times, Elway 13. Kosar completed 58 percent of his iasses, Elway 56 percent.

Yet Elway's ability to run with the ball presents the Cleveland de-fense with a problem the Denver defense can ignore. Elway scrambled for 257 yards this season; Kosar, who prefers the pocket, gained 19 vards on 24 runs

"Elway has the ability to make a good play out of a potentially bad play," said Schottenheimer, calling attention to Elway's 22-yard touch down scramble against England.

Schottenheimer expected Elway to have full mobility Sunday. "I'm sure that he'll be 100 percent," the coach said. "At this point in time, you've got a full season to FREMANTLE Australia - The international jury pondering the survival of Australia IV adjourned Friday night to seek more information before deciding whether the America's Cup defender finals will be an sil-Kooksburtt affair.

One more disqualification would drop Alan Bond's flagship to 71 points — five below presently second-place Kookaburra II and 12 behind first-place Kookaburra III — and halt the 1983 victor's $13 million defense campaign.

Both Kookaburra II skipper Isin Morray and the Australia IV campaign's executive director, Warren. Jones, indicated they will seek court action if the jury decision

"It's certainly possible we would go to court," said Murray, who is protesting Australia IVs use of a new sail called a gennaker. The gennaker is an asymmetrical sall that is a cross between a genoe and a spinnaker, and enhances speed on a close reach in medium to heavy

"I hope fervently we don't have to resort to legal action," Jones said, but added that the Bond camp would seek legal recourse to stop its owner from the best-of-nine swim starting Jan. 14.

After stripping Australia IV of six points for colliding with Kooka-burra III in the last race of the semifinals, the jury of five men and women started deliberating on the sail issue Thursday and reconvened Friday night. The jurers adjourned after an hour "for the purpose of seeking further information" and will reconvene "later in the v end," said a spokesman, Lyall 丑 U.S. Raises Estimate Of Costs to Rescue or Close Banks in 1987 WASHINGTON — Government budget analysts have predicted that federal banking regulators will spend billions of dollars more on bank closings and bailouts this year than had been estimated. The White House Office of Management and Budget now predicts that the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. will pay out $4.05 billion more to close or bail out ailing, federally insured banks than it will collect in premiums this fiscal year, which ends Sept. 30, a budget office spokesman said Thursday.

Last August, the office estimated that the FDIC's collections from premiums would expend its remaining on heart agents and observed. ceed its spending on bank rescues and closures by $1.9 billion. Similarly, in August the budget office esti-mated that for the Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corp., which insures deposits in U.S. thrifts, payments for rescues and closures would exceed premiums by $450 million. It now estimates that the payments will be $4.05 billion more than collected premiums. Euro-Commercial Paper HAT IN ANY ALL HAT IN ANY ANY HAT IN ANY ANY HAT IN ANY ANY HAT IN 15-45 days 76-105 days 106 Agh. 6.15 6.70 6.15 6.70 6.07 6.74 6.07 6.74 6.37 5.84 6.20 5.84 6.20 6.20 6.20 6.20 6.20 6.20 6.20 6.20 6.20 6.20 6.20 6.20 3/1 5 1/4 99 6/4 20 18/4 5 18/4 5 28/4 5 28/4 5 28/4 5

A short, slightly pudgy man, whose hair is thinning and graying, Mr. Parry decided to compete in the America's Cup races after Mr. Bond, another Australian businessman, triumphed in 1983 and brought the silver Cup to Perth.

"Alan said he didn't think he was going to get any competition worth much, and as a result would be underprepared for the defense of the Cup, Mr. Parry recalled. An in-house study estimated that an attempt to capture the Cup would cost $5 million over three years, so Mr. Parry gave the project the nod. He has kept on nodding as his boats have cost nearly $20 million.

A staff of 100 is operating the Kookaburra boats. Much of the money is going into Mr. Parry's passion, technology, such as computer modeling to study alternative keels and computer analyses of the sale of information and experience and even the Kookaburra boats themselves to syndicates planning to compete in the next round of America's Cup races. Negotiations are believed to be under way with several Japanese companies.

Another source of funds would be the commercial development of new technologies discovered in the research for a faster sailboat. About a dozen such commercial technologies have spronted so far in developing the Kookaburra boats, Mr. Parry said.

Analysts and other Australian business executives say that Mr. Parry is typical of Australia's top semen — people like Mr. Bond and Rupert Murdoch or Robert Holmes à Court — in his plain-speaking style and yearning to transcend Australia's borders.

"He's like Bond in many ways, in that he takes big bites and then digests them and takes a profit at best sailing tactics under different conditions.

"Rose sadly irresolute" is a typical entry; "there was an insipid dreamness about me" is anoth-Much of the gloom sprang from anxiety about his professional prospects. The "English experiment" was his decision, after his political aspirations in Scotland had come to nothing, to try his luck as a lawyer in England. He had already practiced law for nearly 20 years in Edinburgh; now, in February 1786, he was called to the bar at one of the Inns of Court in London, the Inner Temple.

But Scottish law is very different from English law, and 45 was late in the day to start experimenting with a new career. Moreover, moving to London meant neglecting his family, who remained in Scot-land, at a time when his wife had already been suffering for years from the consumption that was to kill her.

Solution to Last Week's Puzzle

In the event the experiment proved a miserable failure. But later in 1786 fresh opportunities for advancement seemed to beckon when he was approached by the Earl of Lonsdale, a rathless political boss who dominated large areas of the northwest of England (he had nine members of Parliament in his pocket). At first Boswell was cautious, but with an attractive prize being dangled in front of him— the post of recorder or chief legal officer of the city of Carlisle—he slowly succembed, and for the next three years, as far as politics went, he was to be Lonsdale's creature.

It was a punishing experience. As he found him-self drawn into the web, Boswell funcied that he saw in Lonsdale "an example of an aggregate of greatness: ancient family, immense estates, a created peerage, force of intellect, fierceness, Parliamentary interest." But the earl also turned out to be a capricious and tightfisted tyrant, who enjoyed ex-acting total submission from his dependents.

By the time Lonsdale was ready to make good his promise of the Carlisle appointment, Boswell was asking himself "what I had to do with such a man."

asking himself "what I liad to do with such a man."

("I thought I heard my worthy father ssy, 'James, I left you independent.") He tried to pull out, but Lonsdale's will prevailed, and it was not until the summer of 1790—a year after "The English Experiment" ends—that he finally broke free.

The year after that, in May 1791, he published the "Life of Johnson." It can be something of a shock, reading about his oppressed state of mind while he enjoyed (or endured) Lonsdale's patronage, to recollect that he was simultaneously writing the greatest biography in the language.

Already shot through with frustration and unease, "The English Experiment" closes on a note of deep remouse after his wife's death. Yet it is far from being the depressing work that this may make it sound. Boswell remains Boswell, even in the midst of his troubles: eager, convivial, alert to his own inconsistencies, drinking too much and getting into scrapes. "How material is man!" he reflects after consuming a hearty dinner. "I myself am certainly much so." But he is affectionate, too, and touching and tunny, and he continues to command sympathy through all his vicissitudes.

The temperathat the kickoff was announced as 18 degrees from 7.7 centigrade), but it had dropped from 16 by the time Jerry Kramer's third field cinched the National Football League approach for the Green Bay Packers, 16-7. Bart Starr approached coach Vince Loma siter having been the ball-holder, the

"I think my ears are frozen," Starr said. That wind from left field had gusted up to 50 miles per hour (80 kilometers per hour).

"The ball was like a diving duck," said Y.A. Tittle, the Giants' quarterback. "I threw one pass and it almost came back to me. The short ones worked, but the long ball broke up. We needed the long one."

Tittle had thrown 33 touchdown passes that season. And with a 12-2 record under coach Allie Sherman, the Giants were primed to atone for a 37-0 loss in Green Bay in the 1961 title

But in the gusts of the title game, the Giants' bald 36-year-old quarterback completed only 18 of 41 passes for 197 yards. One of those fluttering passes was deflected by the Packers' Ray Nitschke to another linebacker, Dan Currie, who intercepted. Nitschke also recovered

"Taylor likes to crawl," Huff snapped. "The only way to stop Taylor is to make sure that he's

The Giants got their only touchdown when Erich Barnes, their left cornerback, blocked a punt and Jim Collier recovered the ball in the end zone. In cold weather then, quarterbacks didn't wear gloves. Neither did any of the other players. But they wore ripple-soled football shoes instead of cleats.

"The cold itself wasn't that bad," Starr said. "We've practiced in 15-below-zero weather in Green Bay and it didn't seem this cold. But the wind was brutal."

With a 17-14 lead and slightly more than 2 minutes remaining, the Giants had a third-and-four at their 39-yard line. Halfback Frank Gifford ran a sweep to the right. But in the pileup, Gino Marchetti, the Colts' all-pro defensive end, had an ankle broken.

"I had that first down," Gifford said. "If the referee hadn't been so concerned about helping Marchetti and had marked the ball first, we'd have had the first down and the championship. But he took so much time getting Marchetti out of the pileup, when he put the ball down we were still a few inches short."

ship with a 47-7 rout of the Chicago Bears in their first season at Yankee Stadium, where the "DEE-fense, DEE-fense" chant began. That day the Giants wore white sneakers supplied by Andy Robustelli, their Hall of Fame defensive end who owned a sporting-goods store.

At the Polo Grounds, the Giants won two NFL titles. In 1938 they stopped the Packers, 23-17, when their Hall of Fame center and linebacker, Mel Hein, returned in the closing minutes after having suffered a concussion in the first half. And in 1934 the Giants stunned the Bears, 30-13, in the first "sneakers" game. In zero-degree weather that morning, Ray

10 Players Test Baseball Free-Agency

NEW YORK - Two power-hiting catchers, a former Cy Young Award winner and a batting champion Thursday night rejected lastminute offers to return to their for-mer clubs and will make an unprecedented test of major league baseball's free-agent process.

Catchers Lance Parrish of the Detroit Tigers and Rich Gedman of the Boston Red Sox, left-handed pitcher Ron Guidry of the New York Yankees and outfielder Tim Raines of the Montreal Expos beaded a group of free agents with more credentials than prospects. The others were first baseman Bob Homer of the Atlanta Braves, outfielder Andre Dawson of the Expos, infielders Doyle Alexander of the Braves, Toby Harrah of the Texas Rangers and Gary Roenicke of the Yankees and catcher Bob Boone of the California Angels.

The Players Association confirmed that five players - Emie White of the Toronto Blue Jays, Tommy John and Willie Randolph of the Yankees and Brian Down and Doug DeCinces of the Angels - had re-signed with their clubs.

John signed a one-year guaran-teed contract and Randolph agreed to a two-year deal. The Angels and Blue Jays did not release details of the contracts.

Any player not signed by the midnight EST deadline became ineligible to join his former club until May 1. The unsigned players-face an uncertain future amid charges that owners are in collusion not to sign to free agents. Last year, not one prominent free agent decided to test the market.

The Players' Association contempts and was 13 of 16 from the tends that owners — in violation of free throw line. are collecting to force players into re-signing with their former clubs. Union chief Don Fehr has said that if no major free agents move this year it will support his claim that owners are colluding to restrain the marketplace. After the deadline the Players' Association declined to comment on this year's negotiations.

Of all available players, none of-fered the potential for affecting pennant races as strongly as Whitt, Parrish and Gedman, who came from the three most recent winners in the AL East. Parrish formed part of the Tigers' strength up the middle when they won the 1984 World Series. Now he has back problems, which made the Tigers reinctant to agree to his requests. He rejected a two-year $2.4 nillion offer Thursday night. Gedman hit .258 with 16 homers and 65 RBI last season, helping the Red Sox win the American League permant. He approached the Yan-kees this week, hoping to make a deal, but they declined to negotiate.

Guidry, who won the 1978 Cy Young Award, has twice reached the 20-victory plateau, but his effectiveness has waned and his age, 36, probably concerned the Yankees. Raines led the National League in batting with a 334 average, scoring 91 runs and stealing 70 bases although the Montreal Expos finished 29½ games out of first place in the NL East last season. The Expos would appear to have little prospect of improvement without signing either Raines or Dawson.

U.K. Horse Disqualified — For Eating Candy Bar

By Andrew Warshaw

LONDON — A sweet-toothed thoroughbred that munched on a 30-cent chocolate bar the day before winning a big race has been disqualified, losing $15,000 in prize money and saddling his trainer

The Jockey Club, the governing body of British horseracing, ruled Tuesday that a Mars bar given to De Rigeur, a 4-year-old gelding, contained a stimulant called theobromine that is prohibited under the sport's antidoping laws.

De Rigger, a 20-to-1 long shot ridden by British champion jockey Pat Eddery, won the Balmoral Handicap at Ascot last September, but a routine urine test after the race turned up traces of theobromine. The substance was traced to

"All chocolate contains theobromine, it's naturally present in the cocoa bean at very low levels," said Alison Hill, health affairs manager for Mars Ltd., the British subsidiary of the U.S. company Mars Inc.

"A human being, to get any sigmilicant stimulant effect from theobromine, would have to eat something like 120 100-gram bars of milk chocolate. A horse would have to eat considerably more."

Trainer James Bethell, who was fined £575 ($860), said he didn't stublame 17-year-old stable girl Tanya ly. vival of Australia IV adjourned Friday night to seek more information before deciding whether the Ameri-ca's Cup defender finals will be an all-Kookaburra affair. One more disqualification would drop Alan Bond's flagship to 71 points — five below presently sec-ond-place Kookaburra II and 12 behind first-place Kookaburra III - and halt the 1983 victor's $13 million defense campaign.

Both Kookaburra II skipper lain Murray and the Australia IV campaign's executive director, Warren Jones, indicated they will seek court action if the jury decision isn't favorable.

"It's certainly possible we would go to court," said Murray, who is protesting Australia IV's use of a new sail called a gennaker. The gennaker is an asymmetrical sail that is a cross between a genon and a spinnaker, and enhances speed on a close reach in medium to heavy winds

"I hope fervently we don't have to resort to legal action," Jones said, but added that the Bond camp would seek legal recourse to stop its ouster from the best-of-nine series

starting Jan. 14. After stripping Australia IV of six points for colliding with Kookaburra III in the last race of the semifinals, the jury of five men and women started deliberating on the sail issue Thursday and reconvened Friday night. The jurors adjourned after an hour "for the purpose of seeking further information" and will reconvene "later in the weekend," said a spokesman, Lyall

"There has been so much pressure upon them they decided not to meet at the Port Authority Building as usual but at a secret place," he

Brian Willis, the Kookaburras's sailing rules adviser said the jury erred in not accepting the conclu-sions of the cup matches' chief measurer, who found an infringement of the rules over the way the gennaker was fastened to Australia IV.

In their first ruling, the jury said that although the use of a rope extended the sail further aft than was permitted it was only for a short time, and the protest was dismissed. Willis said. "You can't just say it's all right to break the rules for a short time."

"It is unfortunate that these protests are spoiling what should be a fantastic regatta," said Jones. Jones, who has been with Bond since his triumph in 1983, said, "We have actually raced in more than 200 America's Cup races. In all those previous years we have had five protests."

Since the elimination series started in October to pick the 12-meter yacht to defend the cup, there have been 43 protests, 17 from Kookaburra II, 12 from Australia IV and 9 from Kookaburra IIL got their emeralds out of the vault. The men wrapped their preened with their swords in front of the mirror. The queen mother, who counts Jacqueline Onassis and Queen Elizabeth II among her friends, arrived in her chauf feured white Mercedes. India has changed from the days when maharajas controlled one-third of the country, but the House of Jaipur, the nation's most glamorous clan of onetime royals, did not let that spoil its family reunion.

By Elisabeth Bumiller Washington Past Service AIPUR, India - The women

It was a gathering to mark the recent marriage of a son in an important branch of the Jaiper family. The groom arrived at the wedding by elephant. But the nearly weeklong get-together in this city of palaces was also a chance to celebrate the old traditions in a country that no longer recognizes them. The Jaipurs were among the richest of the country's 600 princely families, and even more than the others, they lived in the India of glitter and excess: tiger shoots, polo matches, party weekends at hunting lodges sur-rounded by the golden desert in state of Rajasthan. The queen mother's grandfather kept trained parrots that rode little silver bicycles. Her mother had a gold tongue scraper and also a live turtle encrusted with diamonds and rubies that she used as a goodbuck charm at the gambling tables of France. But things are not well with the Jaipurs these days. Among the topics at the wedding was a lawit over an estate estimated at $400 million that is splitting the family, pitting the widowed queen mother against her stepson, the current maharaja. At the heart of the quarrel is whether the estate belongs to the whole family or the

"It's only he who is creating this problem," the queen mother says of the maharaja, Bhawani Singh "Bubbles" to friends, Bubble calls the situation "sad" but adds that "it's not like I have everything and the rest of them are out their kingdoms when the country became independent in 1947. Things became more unple when Prime Minister Indira Gandhi abolished their titles and government stipends in 1971.

The star guest at the wedding was the queen mother, Gayatri Devi. When she arrived, people touched her feet. In Jaipur these days she holds court at Lilly Pool, a large sun-filled house on the grounds of her former home, the Rambagh Palace. Thirty years ago the family turned Rambagh into a luxury hotel to pay for the upkeep, and now tourists can stay in Gayatri Devi's old bedroom suite

Life hasn't been the same for some time, so does the queen the princes of India since they lost mother, still striking at 67, walk-home with her," the queen mother says. Last year Mick Jagger dropped by her stenson's house. In India, she has projects: two schools, a dhurrie rug business, a stud farm, charity work. In New York a little more than a year ago, she went to the rounds of parties celebrating the "Costumes of Royal India" exhibit at the Metropolitan Museum; 40 percent of the show came from Jaipur and the family's private collection.

She grew up as the daughter of the Maharaja of Cooch Behar, in northeastern India, in a palace as a liberated princess who never lived in "purdah," cloistered away in the traditional women's quarters. She shot her first panther when she was 12, went to finishing school in London and Switzerland, then fell in love with s dreamboat, the young Maharaja of Jaipur, "Jai" to his friends. He was one of the world's finest polo players and liked a good party. She became his third wife, then had to adjust to life in Jaipur with easier to get on with your hus-band's other wife, who has an official position, and a status, than his mistress, who's asurping you," she

Jai died in 1970 of a heart attack during a polo much, leaving her, she once wrote, "to retreat into stricken acclusion, overpowered by grief." She has recoun her life in her book, "A Princess Remembers," written with Southa

In the lawsuit, she has aligned herself against Bubbles and with his three younger stepbrothers. They argue that when Bubbles took possession of the estate after Jai died, he did so on behalf of the family. But Bubbles says family custom dictates that he should be the sole inheritor.

In 1932, Jai married a second vife, or "Second Her Highness." This was also arranged by the family. She gave birth to two sons, Joey and Pat, and lived in the women's quarters. In 1940, Jai and the current queen mother married for love. At that time she was called "Third Her Highness" and gave birth to one son, Jagat.

The family insists that everyone got on well. "In those days, lots of people had two wives," says Joey, who manages some of the family investments. We were all treated the same. We never felt 'this is my mother, and this is not my mother.' Our father got on well with all

The wedding went off as planned, which was endlessly into the night. The bride looked lovely, if slightly stricken. The queen mother paid her respects, then waved goodbye to the crowd from the window of her white Mercedes. All in all, it was a succes ful, lavish event, although nothing close to the kind of celebration the Jaipurs threw in the late '40s when ing terms with the rest of the fam-ily. New York for faisifying records to evade sales taxes. Mayor Edward L. Koch of New York said it was the largest penalty levied in the state in such a case. Two of the company's officers, Claude Arpels, 74, the president, and Al Schwartz, 66, the controller, received conditional discharges from state Supreme discharges from state Supreme Court Justice George Roberts after each pleaded guilty Thursday to a single count of a 273-count indictment. The judge fined Arpels $20,000, payable immediately, but spared Schwartz jail or a fine "probably because he was just following directions," Robert Morgentham, the Manhattan district attempts said at a page Conference. torney, said at a news conference. To avoid collecting and paying sales taxes, the store falsely claimed that delivery of high-priced mer-chandise was made out of state. Abraham Bidemaan, the city finance commissioner, said the city and state lose more than $400 million a year because stores and their customers avoid sales taxes.

A man dying of AIDS who wants to renew the civil-marriage vows he made to his wife three years ago has been denied a request to have it done in New York cathedral. Monsignor James F. Rigney, the rector of St. Patrick's Cathedral, reversed a priest's decision to allow David Heiner to partake in the ceremony, which had been scheduled for Feb. 14. Rigney said the church's policy was not related to the Catholic Church's stand against homosexuality. Hefner said he was a homosexual before his marriage.

The National Gallery of Art in Washington said Thursday it will acquire a modern art collection it called one of the most important of the last half century. The collection belongs to the Maryland real estate developer Robert E. Meyerhoff, said the gallery director, J. Carter Brown. Started in the 1950s, it consists of nearly 100 major American and European paintings and more than 100 drawings, prints and sculptures dating since World War II. The gallery said the collection includes a strong concentration of works by Jasper Johns, Ellsworth Kelly. Roy Lichtenstein, Robert Kelly, Roy Lichter erg and Frank Stella > Stere Winwood led the 1985. Grammy awards field with five nominations, the National Acade my of Recording Arts & Sciences announced, Paul Simon and Peter Gabriel followed with four nominations each. Winwood enjoyed the greatest success of his 20-year ca-reer in 1986 with the appare album "Back in the Highlife" and No. 1 single "Higher Love," The winners will be announced Fob. 24.

Unpublished short stories by the mystery writer Dashiell He have turned up among the posses-sions of Lillian Hellman and will soon be published. A trustee for Heliman's estate, Peter Feibles said about a half-dozen stories b Hammett were found among Hellman's belongings — in desk drawers and boxes — after she died in June 1984. Hellman was Hammett's lover and close friend for decades until he died 25 years ago. He left title to his literary property

Placide Domingo is being such for more than £100,000 ($145,000) by organizers of the London con-cert he canceled last month in a cloud of controversy. The Kruggi Organization, which promoted it concert at Wembley Stadium in London, amounced Thursday that it had begun legal proceedings against the Spanish-born tenor and his agents, Margherita Stafford and David Law. Domingo announced the day before the Dec. 17 concert that the £15.50-£50.50 ticket prices were "very, very high" and he would not perform.

Xavier Cagat, who turned 87 on New Year's Day, said in Barcelona Friday he is coming out of retirement after 15 years and will return to the stage with a new band next Tuesday. Cugat said that the 25member group would play the same Latin American style which carned him the nickname "the Rhumba King" during his heyday in the 1930s, Born in Spain but raised in Cuba, Cugat spent nearly a mon!"
